THE GOVERNMENT IS EMPLOYING 200 new men in a determined effort to prevent shipping whiskey from Canada to Detroit. They will find it difficult, according to a reliable person, who says whiskey is sent across now by torpedoes, dragging cases attached to a buoy, which are picked up later by waiting boats, guided by a flare.

An official of the Canadian government, traveling on a rum-running boat from the Canadian shore to Detroit, was assured by the bootleg commander that Government officials "never happened to be just where the rum boat landed, and never would happen to be there, for good reasons."

Enforcing prohibition is hard, and is not made easier by the rather frequent killings by prohibition agents.

A youth recently shot by prohibition agents has just died. A man driving an automobile with his wife and two children was shot dead by prohibition agents.

Such incidents might worry sincere prohibitionists. Too many such killings may arouse antagonism.

The new commandment, "Thou shalt not drink," has not yet eliminated the older commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," as Mr. Harding points out in a forceful cartoon.

Dean Hutchins, soon to be head of the University of Chicago and youngest president of any big college in the United States, says the teacher's real work is teaching students to THINK.

"A university is not made to reform or amuse young men, but to teach them TO THINK, to think straight if possible, but to think always for themselves."

No educator ever said anything more important or expressed more accurately the purpose of education.

But how can you teach men TO THINK? That is the question. You must take them young. Professor Hutchins says: "It is sad but true that at 18 or 19 it is too late to take a boy and make a man of him and interest him in his studies. He is solidified too often in more ways than one."

Galveston decides that Miss Lisl Goldarbeiter, Austrian brunette with blue eyes, is the most beautiful girl in the world. In fact, she is crowned "Miss Universe."

The most beautiful girl to be found in the United States, Miss Irene Ahlberg, only got second prize and $1000.

"Queen of the Universe" seems rather a large title. Miss Goldarbeiter would probably be amazed if she could see the young ladies on some planet one million light years away from this corner of space, and those far off, interstellar, young women, perhaps 1000 times as big as Miss Goldarbeiter, and each with 1000 eyes, perhaps, would be surprised to see her.

A young prince, cousin of the Spanish King, one of the Bourbons (nothing to do with whiskey in this case) is said to have cancelled his engagement to the widow of an American steel king.

The young lady, charming in all ways, and very young for 50, was not willing to settle more than $200,000 on the young prince.

That gentleman of a family that "never forgets anything and never learns anything" does not forget that he cannot live now on $200,000.

At a cost of $9,740,000, a new building will house the United States Supreme Court "in keeping with the dignity of that tribunal."

Old-fashioned judges might think it hard to spend 10 million dollars on a building without upsetting one important Supreme Court tradition, which is democratic simplicity.

It is to be hoped that fancy imitations of European ceilings and other expensive ornamentation will be missing when the building is finished.

The Supreme Court requires no "fancy" background.

When, and if, Ramsay MacDonald comes here to see President Hoover, it is suggested that he will discuss the advisability of recognizing Russia's government and thus solidifying peace.

In Mr. Hoover, Mr. MacDonald will find a man who has traveled and will give him an intelligent hearing. It would not have been so had the head of the British Labor party called upon some of our earlier provincial presidents.

Even now, some of our "best financial minds" will question the propriety of talking to the head of any Labor government.

SAYS READING GOT '$600,000'

Testimony that Hugh B. Monjar, former president of the Decimo Club, was warned by Arthur K. Reading he could get a fight if he wanted it but "we'll make it so hot for you you'll wish you had gone into the middle of the Atlantic ocean and jumped off," was given in Supreme Court today.

Monjar, testifying under direct examination by Atty. Frederick W. Mansfield, president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, said the threat was made when he refused to sign an assignment of securities

Sneak Gets $11,000 in Bonds

A sneak thief, operating during the brief absence from home of William H. Roberts of 583-A Tremont st., today, got away with negotiable bonds valued at $11,000, according to a report to the police.

The bonds, two in number, were stolen from the coat of Roberts, left hanging in his home while he went across the street.

They were bonds of the Superior-Magnesite Corp., issued through the First National Bank of Las Vegas, Neva., for $10,000 and $1,000, Roberts said, and could be negotiated at any bank or brokerage house.

Roberts, a real estate dealer, told police he was away from the house only a short time leaving it unguarded. Police believe the thief either knew of the bonds and awaited an opportunity to take them, or was a "prowler" who found the door unlocked and went through the house. As far as could be learned nothing else was taken, and no one was found who saw a stranger enter or leave.

MORGAN IN BIG POWER MERGER

New York, June 13 (INS)—A new $500,000,000 merger of important public utility companies in upper New York State was reported to be in the final stages today.

An announcement was expected shortly.

The names of the companies involved were not revealed and neither were the details of the plans to create a state-wide system of public utility properties.

It is understood J. P. Morgan & Co. figures prominently in the deal to put over the country's largest giant utility holding combine. At their offices, it is said, the negotiations have been virtually completed.

At first, the reports have it, the merger involves utility companies operating in the hudson valley and northern and western New York state only. Eventually it is believed, an association of the up-state system with New York city's largest power company may take place.

The vast combine would draw largely on the state's extensive water power resources.

MONJAR SAYS HE TURNED OVER $600,000 SECURITIES TO READING

'NEVER GOT A PENNY BACK'

in conformance with an escrow agreement.

He had previously testified he turned over to Reading, then attorney-general, $600,000 worth of securities, because he was about to be married and feared prosecution, and never received back a penny.

The witness said that at the Oct. 15 meeting when Reading's proposition as to the escrow was discussed, the attorney-general's attitude was "stern and disagreeable."

He told of a meeting on Dec. 19, 1927, to which Reading was not invited, but he appeared and demanded of Monjar that he tell the truth concerning Decimo matters and Reading's activities.

DENIES BRIBERY ATTEMPT

The witness testified he brought suit on Dec. 14 against the Decimo Club and 14 other defendants including Reading. The papers, which had been impounded, were then introduced and read by Atty. Mansfield. In substance they stated that because of the prominence of the attorney-general and his official position, harm might be done. The papers also described Monjar's accusations as "salacious, malicious and libelous."

Under cross-examination Monjar said the Decimo Club never tried to bribe Reading and there was no reason to seek protection from anyone.

Monjar also said that after the Decimo Club had loaned him $100,000 for business purposes on Reading's endorsement, the latter accused Monjar of having stolen the money, adding he could obtain a conviction against him before any jury in the country."

Questioned about Herbert L. Barrett, Boston attorney and friend of Reading, in whose name the $25,300 check for the Attorneyship was made out, Monjar said he was only a figurehead. He said he understood Barrett's name was to appear as counsel, but that Reading could do the work. The witness testified he recalled a report sent to members stating that legal expenses amounting to $25,000 had been paid to Atty. Herbert L. Barrett.

ACCUSED BY READING

His work, he told Reading, would consist in going over all the papers of the Decimo Club and putting them on strictly legal lines. Another conference was held some time before June 20, the witness said, in which Reading told Monjar he was in a ticklish position.

"He said I had fraudulently used my position," the witness said, adding that the accusation had been an unsatisfying effect on his mind.

"He advised me to take a vacation and avoid questioning by the attorney-general. I objected, saying I had nothing to fear and that I was ready to answer all questions.

Q.—Was there a talk about an escrow agreement? A.—I told Reading I would assent to his proposition to turn over all my securities until the matter was adjusted and would do whatever the board wanted me to do.

Q.—What was the value of the securities you turned over? A.—Between $600,000 and $700,000. I turned them over to Reading on October 19.

Q.—Ever get them back? A.—Not a penny.

Minor Appointments of Allen Approved

Only two nominations were submitted at the regular meeting of the Executive Council of Governor Allen. They were those of Francis J. Lasell of Northbridge, who was reappointed a member of the Wachusett Mountain State Reservation Commission.

Forest Fire Calls 400 Into Service

Sterling, June 13—One house was destroyed, a dozen others, including the home of Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, were threatened and $15,000 worth of cordwood and lumber was burned when a forest fire raged over 150 acres near Kendall Hill. Four hundred fire fighters finally got the blaze under control.

$12,000 Damage By Lakeport N. H. Fire majority in the House, with the aid of some Democrats, proved sufficient to resist the determined effort of a Democratic-insurgent Republican coalition to win House approval of the debenture "rider" to the $500,000,000 farm bill.

Laconia, N. H., June 13—One of the most spectacular fires here for a number of years caused damage estimated at $12,000, and for a few minutes threatened several tenement houses and the large ice houses of the Independent Ice Company, located on the shores of Lake Paugus, above Black Brook in Lakeport.

HOUSE REJECTS DEBENTURES

As a result of the House action a new parley on the farm bill will be held by Senate and House conference committees. It is expected to result in the Senate committee taking the debenture back to the Senate for another vote, with administration leaders hopeful of changing enough votes there to defeat it.

The export debenture plan calls for payment of a bounty on exportations of surplus farm products payment to be paid out of tariff receipts.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the Senate, said after the House vote was announced, he would abide by the House decision, and it is expected he will not continue to ask for Senate approval of the debenture plan.

Mrs. Coolidge at School Graduation

Northampton, June 13—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge returned to the hall where she was once a teacher, to witness the graduation exercises at the Clark School for the Deaf. She sat with other townspeople in the audience, but after the ceremonies went forward to talk to her old friend, Dr. Caroline A. Yale, principal emeritus of the school, and to greet the graduates.

Miss Yale, now an invalid, was brought to the platform in a wheel chair, and the audience arose as a tribute of respect as she entered the hall.

Autoist Injured Fleeing Live Wire

As sparks played around, Gallo jumped out of the machine and started to run. He fell, injuring his back. He was treated by the City Physician Joseph C. Henken.

Motorboat Racers Under Police Ban

Worcester, June 13—Outboard motor racing is in trouble on Lake Quinsigamond because of numerous complaints made to the police and Chief Thomas P. Foley has issued orders that rule 4 of the regulations which governs conditions on about the lake be enforced. This provides in substance that no motor boat shall be driven at a speed of more than 12 miles per hour except by permit of the Lake Quinsigamond commission for a special occasion.

French Fliers Speed Over Sea

daring French fliers, made a perfect takeoff at 10:08 a. m., witnessed by 30,000 persons.

But at 10:22 a. m. the Green Flash skidded in the sand, bent over on her side and all but "cracked up."

An hour after the beautiful takeoff in the brilliant sunlight a radiogram sang back from the Yellow Bird's sending apparatus to a portable radio station here.

"Everything O. K.," said the message.

According to radio reports, the Yellow Bird was following a route toward Cape Sable, N. S., for a swing east along the 43st parallel to longitude 25, then to Cape Ortegal, Spain, and then overland to Le Bourget flying field in Paris.

The Yellow Bird had a little difficulty in gaining altitude at takeoff, but in swinging from a southerly to an easterly direction was given a lift by the wind and a few miles out began to climb.

CLIMBS TO 2000 FEET.

A hundred miles off the coast Arnisea Lotti, Jr., sponsor of the flight of the Yellow Bird and radio operator aboard, flashed back word that she was climbing to an altitude of better than 2000 feet.

Lotti said that his youthful companions—Jean Assolant, pilot, and Rene Lefevre, navigator—were in excellent spirits and full of confidence.

The Paris-bound monoplane was accompanied at the start of her flight by the Coast Guard amphibian plane Loening, in command of Lieut. Leonard M. Malika, of the Gloucester base of the Coast Guard service. The Coast Guard plane returned to Old Orchard about 40 minutes after the hopoff.

Lotti was still sending back radio reports to the beach here when the Loening returned with the word that the Coast Guard amphibian had accompanied the Yellow Bird approximately 75 miles off shore and that all was going well.

At the previous takeoff two weeks ago the Yellow Bird had an accident and narrowly escaped dropping into the sea. The vibration of her single 600-horsepower motor opened a seam in the fuselage gasoline tank and she began to spill her fuel in a dangerous manner. Today, however, Lotti had taken the precaution to mix benzol with his gasoline of higher volatility than used before in order to eliminate the vibration. Apparently he was successful.

BELIEVE BOY ABOARD

A stowaway was believed by the hundreds of spectators on the beach here to be aboard the Yellow Bird. He is said to be Allen Jordan, 13, of Portland.

Spectators on the beach said they saw a boy climb up under the tail of the Yellow Bird while the fliers were having their photographs taken in front of the whirling propellers just before the takeoff.

Several spectators said that they were sure they had seen the boy in Portland and that they were equally sure that they saw him climb into the plane and that he did not come out.

Mrs. Jean Assolant, bride of a week of the pilot of the Yellow Bird, had made an unsuccessful attempt to go overseas as a passenger in the monoplane. Lotti, however, told Mrs. Assolant that there was not enough room. And she was forced to wave a tearful farewell to her husband as she went away. Mrs. Assolant is the former Pauline Parker of Worcester and New York.

GREEN FLASH WRECKED.

She stood by the radio set after the take-off and eagerly awaited reports of the progress of the French plane.

Hopes of Roger Q. Williams and Lieut. Lewis A. Yancey of making the double take-off a transatlantic "air derby" were dashed when the Green Flash, for the third time in two weeks, became sandbound and tipped on her left side.

There was little hope, according to the American airmen, of ever using the Green Flash again for a transatlantic hop.

Her wheels were snapped off, the blades of the propeller were thrown out of true when they came in contact with the sand, the left wing was cracked and the gasoline tanks were broken open.

A great pool of gasoline stood about the plane when her motors stopped and a police detail was brought up to prevent smoking near the Green Flash for fear of an explosion.

The gasoline was drained from the tanks so that the plane might be dragged up to high ground away from the tide, which was due to start coming in soon.

When Mrs. Yancey saw the crash she cried out: "Oh, my God! Are they hurt?"

She was trembling, but friends assisted her and later, referring to the crash, she said, "Isn't that hard luck?"

Late in the forenoon when radio reports from the Yellow Bird ceased, Lieut. Malika, whose plane is equipped with radio, went out about 100 miles to sea to try to pick up another report. He returned shortly before noon, however, with the statement that he had not heard or seen the French plane.

A Coast Guard patrol boats were in the distance off the coast, but no word came from them of the transatlantic airplane.

Bride "Listens In" for Code From Yellow Bird

Old Orchard, Me., June 13 (AP)—An attractive blonde young woman with blue eyes seated before a radio receiver in the lobby of a hotel here today, nervously twirling the dials to pick up code messages that might tell her of the progress of the Yellow Bird, which carried away her husband of three days, Jean Assolant, pilot of the ship.

Her lips trembled as she spoke of the rudds checked young pilot whom she married three days ago.

She said she could read code if it was not sent too fast, and planned to devote most of the afternoon spinning the dials.

EXONERATE COX IN RUM SLAYING

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Seymour Lowman, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in a statement today said Customs Patrolman Cox, who shot Archibald Eugster at Detroit, did it "in the regular line of his duty" when rum runners tried to recapture a boat seized by a customs officer.

"We have received a final report from the customs agents with reference to the shooting of Archibald Eugster, an alleged rum runner, by Jonah Cox, customs border patrolman," Lowman said. "As a result of this report, which we gave to the press, Cox has been exonerated."

CHASED RUM RUNNERS

They discovered a rum runner going into the River Rouge and pursued her. The rum runner had a crew of four men. The government boat had two men.

"Just before the government boat overhauled the rum runner, the rum runner was beached and the men escaped into the brush. The customs picket boat had orders not to leave its station and so one of the customs agents went to call help from the base to take charge of the rum runners' boat and its cargo.

KILLED IN STRUGGLE

"Shortly after that the rum-runners returned and tried to recapture their boat and its cargo, and in the struggle that ensued Eugster was shot by Customs Patrolman Cox. It was so evident that the shooting by Cox was done in the regular line of his duty that the local authorities made no arrest and exonerated Cox from any charge."

Lowman added to his statement a paragraph saying that the Treasury had not yet received a full report of the case of Border Patrolman White, who shot Henry Virsula at International Falls, Minn., Saturday night. He said a report was in the mails and was expected shortly.

2 DYING, 4 HURT IN TRIPLE CRASH

Salem, N. H., June 13—A boy and a girl were probably fatally injured and four others slightly injured in a triple auto crash on Broadway, near Cluff's Corner, today.

Ruth Townsend, 18, of Union st., North Andover, and Kenneth Ehmere, 18, of 2 Putnam st., Danvers, are not expected to live at Lawrence General Hospital.

The four others, taken to their homes after hospital treatment are:

Freeman Hepburn, 29, Montrose st., Malden; Mary Cunningham, 20, Howard st., Lawrence; James T. Coughlin, 25, Hinchery st., Lowell, and Arthur F. Rogers, 28, Cedar st., Lowell.

One car, operated by Peter Simon of Salem, ran out of gas. Simon and his brother, Andrew, got out of the car. A roadster, which police said was driven by Joseph Elmeir, crashed into the stalled car and sent it crashing from the road into a ditch. The Simon car also tipped over.

Swerving, the machine hit a sedan going in the same direction. This car also turned over.

GIRL IS ATTACKED AND BURNED

missing from her home since June 6 was badly burned about the face and hands from acid. She was taken in a police ambulance to the Middlesex Hospital, where her condition is said to be serious.

Meanwhile, on information furnished the authorities by the parents of the girl, a search is being made for several men and arrests are expected shortly.

Receiving a report a week ago that the girl was missing, the Cambridge police broadcast her description in a circular to every city and town in Massachusetts. The search in Cambridge and Greater Boston was being continued when word came of the discovery in the Second st. cellar.

A squad of detectives and patrolmen were rushed to the scene. The mutilated girl was carried to an ambulance and dispatched to the hospital. Her condition at this time is such that she cannot be questioned.

Meantime, the parents of the girl went to police headquarters, and as a result of the information they gave the search for several local youths was immediately begun.

Although the police refused to give out details of the interview with the parents, it was learned that the girl had been brutally attacked during an auto ride to Revere Beach on the night she disappeared.

Tariff Has Dual Effect Harvard Expert Shows

THE TARIFF AND PRICES

By PROF. T. N. CARVER

Harvard's Political Economist and Authority on the Tariff

(Copyright, 1929, by the Consolidated Press Association.)

Washington, June 13—The question, who pays the tariff, depends altogether upon how the tariff affects prices. If the prices of dutiable commodities are higher in the home market than they would be if there were no tariff, then to that extent the home consumer pays the tariff. If the prices of those same commodities are depressed in the countries from which they come, then to that extent the foreign producer pays the tariff.

With this question of principle clearly in mind, all we need to do is to see how and where prices are affected in any individual case. When we have ascertained those simple facts, we shall know who pays the tariff.

For example, does the tariff on cattle depress the price of cattle in Canada, from which we get a good many stockers and feeders, or does it raise the price of cattle and beef in this country? If it depresses the price of cattle in Canada, then to that extent Canadian cattle men help to pay our tariff. They pay it by accepting lower prices for the cattle they send us. If the tariff raises the price of cattle and beef in this country, then, to that extent, the home consumer of beef helps to pay the tariff. If it does both, then the cost is divided, the Canadian growers paying part and the home consumers paying part.

DUAL EFFECT

In either case there is likely to be some bad reasoning. Some cattle feeder on this side of the line is likely to discover that stocker cattle are selling in Canada for two cents a pound less than in this country. He is likely to say that if it were not for the tariff he could buy Canadian stockers for two cents less than he now has to pay. But, at the same time, some Canadian cattle grower will discover that cattle are selling two cents a pound higher in this country than in Canada. He might then say that if it were not for the American tariff he could get two cents more a pound for his cattle than he is now able to get. They can't both be right, but one is just as likely to be right as the other.

As a matter of fact, both are about half right and half wrong for tariff does both. It depresses somewhat the price to the Canadian grower, and it raises somewhat the price to the American consumer. If it does not depress the price to the Canadian grower, why are the Canadian growers so disturbed over the threatened increase in our tariff on cattle? If it does not lift the price in this country, why should our cattle men want a tariff.

TARIFF PROTECTS

Or take the case of sugar, does the sugar duty depress the price which the Cuban producer gets, or does it raise the price of sugar in this country? The Cuban sugar producers seem to think that our tariff raises the price, and they ought to know. The only possible way it could hurt them would be to depress the price which they get. If it depresses the price which they get, then they help to pay our tariff by accepting a lower price for the sugar which they send us.

As in the case of Canadian cattle, and all similar cases, this sugar situation begets faulty reasoning. Some extremely "practical" mind will demonstrate statistically that raw sugar is cheaper in Cuba than in this country. He will say that this proves conclusively that the consumer pays the tariff. But this conclusion is based on the assumption that raw sugar would continue to be as cheap in Cuba as it now is even if there were no American tariff. If it were put to a really practical test, that is, if the American tariff were repealed, we might find that we could not buy raw sugar as cheaply in Cuba, or Canadian cattle as cheaply in Canada, as we now can.

The actual changes of prices which result from an import duty are determined by the success of the importer in shifting the burden. He will try to get the foreign producer to sell at a lower price—and he may succeed if the foreign producer is dependent upon his American market. He will also try to sell at a higher price to the American consumer through the merchant, and he may succeed if the American consumer is dependent upon the imported product.

Whether the importer succeeds in shifting the burden or not, and the direction in which he shifts it, if he does, will depend upon how indispensable the American market is to the foreign producer and how indispensable the imported product is to the home consumer. If either is in a position of independence, he will not accept the burden.

PRODUCTS NEEDED

The Canadian cattle grower may be taken as an illustration of a foreign producer to whom the American market is almost indispensable. What else could he do with his cattle? European markets are a long way off and transportation to those markets would cost more than the American tariff. He might grow something else beside cattle, but the chances are that he would have to sell it to us and that it also would have to pay a duty. About his only alternative would be to go out of business, or grow things for his own consumption.

On the other hand, the American consumer of beef is in a somewhat stronger position. Canadian cattle, or imported cattle from any source are not indispensable to him. He can fall back on the domestic supply, which at present is ample. In the case of coffee. The results are quite different. Brazil has the field to the world in which to sell, and our consumers have no domestic supply on which to fall back. Brazilian coffee, which makes up the greater part of the world's supply, is more nearly indispensable to American consumers than the American market is to the Brazilian producers.

PROTESTS POUR INTO SENATE ON TARIFF

Washington, June 13—Scores of protests against excessive rates in the Hawley bill have been pouring in on the Senate finance committee as that body has started the hearings on the tariff measure.

The protests mostly were from organizations of consumers and wage earners who believe many of the new schedules proposed are far above what they should be to give adequate protection to industry; but some of the protests indicated sentiment against the exception features of the bill is rapidly rising in all sections of the country.

With the full finance committee in attendance yesterday, a number of witnesses were heard both in favor and against the proposal to substitute American for foreign valuations in fixing tariff levies. The charge that the Ford Company, because it has branches in large American corporations which recently have established foreign branch factories, ultimately will seek to have their foreign-made products competes in American markets, was made by Matthew Woll, representing the American wage earners' protective conference.

Woll said the conference represented 2,500,000 American workmen who compete directly with foreign made products. Woll said these American corporations have gone abroad for the dual purpose of supplying their foreign markets and also to get cheap labor. He added that this will reduce American export trade.

LYNN MOTHER, 72, FACES 5 YEARS FOR RUM SALE

MAN, 61, SAVES HIS BRIDE, 21, FROM JAIL

The plea of a 61-year-old bridegroom for leniency toward his 21-year-old bride, charged with larceny, was successful in Municipal Court today when Judge Dowd placed the case against Mrs. Claire Sculley of Tremont st., South End, on file.

She was charged with stealing $4000 from her aged husband's son by a previous marriage, Charles Sculley of Manchester, N. H. Following the testimony of police, Sculley, in tears, said he knew nothing of the theft, that he still loved his young wife and begged the judge to be lenient.

The fact that all but a small part of the money had been recovered, coupled with the plea, decided Judge Dowd that the ends of justice had been met, so he discharged the remorseful bride with a warning.

According to the testimony, she married Sculley in Manchester on May 1. He showered her with luxuries, including an auto, and brought her to Boston to live. They took an apartment on Tremont st., South End.

A few days later she disappeared and the heartsick bridegroom appealed to the police. At the same time Manchester, Charles Sculley discovered the disappearance of $4000 left him in his mother's will.

Police of East Dedham st. station, who were searching for the bride, found her on a fire escape outside the Tremont st. home. She was trying to enter a window to recover clothing she had left.

She admitted taking the money, saying she had given $1000 to a friend. The balance, she said, she buried in the cellar in Manchester. Police found $3590 buried in a tomato can.

MRS. OSGOOD'S ESTATE NEAR $2,500,000

An estate of almost $2,500,000 was left by Mrs. Hannah T. (Draper) Osgood, of Hopedale.

An inventory filed in probate court in Worcester today showed personal property of $2,433,180.33, and real estate in $71,198. She had jewelry of $27,113 and personal belongings at her home in Boston with a value of $15,840.

Mrs. Osgood was a member of a family distinguished in statehood and state affairs. Her husband was former Senator Edward L. Osgood, and one brother, Eben S. Draper, was a governor of Massachusetts. Another brother, Gen. William F. Draper was American ambassador to Italy.

Her will contained many bequests to charity and church organizations. She died in March at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

POPE TO BLESS MARRIAGE

Dispatches from Rome today stated that Francis D. Comerford, president of the New England Power Association, of Brookline, and Miss Mary McLaughlin of Worcester and Boston, have been received by the Pope and promised a special benediction at their coming marriage.

The reception took place after the couple had filed with the American consul at Rome, affidavits of intent to marry. When the Pope learned they were to be wed shortly in the Holy City, he said he would convey a special benediction upon them.

It is understood the ceremony will take place about June 17, with Mgr. Spellman of Boston, a domestic prelate in the papal household, officiating.

Comerford, one of the youngest business executives of the country, sailed with his mother, Mrs. Mary J. Dowd Comerford of Beacon st., Brookline, and his fiancee on May 23 for Rome. A short time previously he had been made a Knight of Malta by the Pope.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of the late Patrick and Mrs. McLoughlin of Vernon st., Worcester.

U. S. LOVE TIES CUT IN SECRET BY GARIBALDI

New York, June 13 (AP)—Gen. Giuseppe (Peppino) Garibaldi, youngest grandson of the great Italian liberator, has obtained an annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Madelyn Nichols Taylor Garibaldi, former New Orleans heiress.

The annulment order was issued by Judge Tompkins in Nyack, N. Y., March 9, but did not become known until today.

Rumor that Garibaldi had begun annulment proceedings, published early in March, described the action as a "move of chivalry" on the part of the general toward his wife in an attempt to clear up technicalities arising from Mrs. Garibaldi's Mexican divorce from Stevenson Pierce Taylor.

Mrs. Garibaldi, who is preparing to sail tomorrow for a tour of the Orient, refused to discuss the action. Her attorney, Judge Charles Wee, said:

"The general wanted another marriage ceremony performed as she didn't. It all came about through argument over the legality of her divorce obtained in Yucatan, Mex., in 1925.

"Taylor sued for divorce in November, 1926, naming Gen. Garibaldi. He charged the divorce obtained in Mexico was not recognized in this country. Mrs. Taylor and Gen. Garibaldi were married in Philadelphia in January, 1928.

Gen. Garibaldi is a veteran of seven wars. In Italy he was known as a leader in the opposition to Mussolini.

Mrs. Garibaldi, prominent in New York society, is the daughter of John W. Nichols of New Orleans.

MEDALS FOR BIG TERCENTENARY ARE WRONG

Massachusetts is "all wet" again regarding its own particular emblem, the "Sacred Cod."

Following on the heels of the automobile registration plate blunder of two years ago, when some strange design of the deep with but slight resemblance to a cod was put on the plates, they have gone and done it again on the special tercentenary medals.

To the amazement of all fishermen and those familiar with the fish which first made the Bay State famous, the medallion bears something resembling a modernistic impression of a salmon crossed with a pike.

TONGUE-TIED SPELLING

The blunder was brought to light when Gov. Allen was presented with one of the first of the medallions struck in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Massachusetts. The presentation was made by Prof. Joseph H. Beale of Cambridge with members of the Massachusetts tercentenary conference.

In the middle of the medallion was a reproduction of an alleged fish purporting to be the Sacred Cod which hangs in the chamber of the House of Representatives, but the like of which, fishermen say, was never seen on land or sea.

After the shock of the discovery had been somewhat lessened, it was then found that another mistake had been made by whoever drew up the design, in the word "Massachusetts," the old-fashioned form of the letter "S" was carefully used in every instance except the last, so that the word appears on the medal as follows: "Maffachufetts."

As for the so-called cod on the tablet, old salts at the fish pier were unanimous today when shown a photographic copy of it. Wasn't the number plate incident bad enough, they asked, without being repeated?

And yet here was much the same sort of thing, although the lines were different. The number plate cod had no fins, among other oddities which made it a fish in a class by itself.

The medallion cod, the fishermen said, had perfectly good fins but the tail, mouth and body were all wrong, with the white stripe for which a cod is noted, conspicuous by its absence.

Frank J. O'Hara of O'Hara Bros., and the Atlantic & Pacific Fish Co., said, after careful examination:

"I would call it a western salmon. Yes, it is nearer to a salmon than the section as a "move of chivalry" on the part of the general toward his wife in an attempt to clear up technicalities arising from Mrs. Garibaldi's Mexican divorce from Stevenson Pierce Taylor.

Mrs. Garibaldi, who is preparing to sail tomorrow for a tour of the Orient, refused to discuss the action. Her attorney, Judge Charles Wee, said:

Hungry Children in Jamaica Plain Will No Longer Want

THERE are a lot of happy people in Boston today. They are happy because they made someone else happy because they answered the appeal of help for hungry children.

Out at 3379 Washington st., Jamaica Plain, on Wednesday there were four children, the daughter and sons of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hamilton. Since Saturday they had nothing to eat but dry bread. Hard luck had dogged the father's footsteps for months, and, as always, the innocent suffered.

But through the Boston Evening American Mrs. Hamilton asked for help—not for herself or her husband, but for those four bright little youngsters—"the innocent bystanders in something they could not understand."

And the people of Boston came through. Starting a few hours after the story "was on the street in the American," a steady procession of men and women called at the bare three-room tenement.

They were laden with food, clothing, toys and money. For the first time since Saturday the whole family had a real meal. For the first time in months those children had shoes and clothing which was not torn, worn or ragged.

They couldn't believe it.

Early this morning a woman walked into the office of the Boston Evening American. "I want to do something for those children out in Jamaica Plain," she said. "Here's some money I want you to give them. And I'm going right out there myself and see what else I can do. Children should never suffer like that."

Then a large company—it is said business has not heart—sent their representative to see Mrs. Hamilton. Beginning today and continuing "until the family gets on its feet" that company will have two quarts of milk delivered for those children every day.

Mrs. Hamilton is overjoyed at the sudden turn of events. Several men have promised her husband an all-year-round job. That is going to be a novelty for a man who has been unable to get steady work for months.

"I wish I could thank everyone personally for what they have done for me. I wish I could thank the American for its interest in our plight. But my heart is too full. All I can do is pray for all of them. They have given us a chance."

That is Mrs. Hamilton's statement.

It was a heartless thief who stole Hamilton's pay Saturday, who really brought about this show of human kindness and charity. It was he who stole the food from the mouths of those four children and sent those parents into utter despair.

But things are brighter out at 3379 Washington st. today. Again the people of Boston have shown their worth.

UNION HEADS FACE COURTS

Martin J. McMahon and William Larkin, grand lodge officers of the International Brotherhood of Machinists, appeared in the West Roxbury court today to answer the charge of distributing handbills in violation of the city ordinance. The distributing of the handbills occurred on Sprague st., near the Dedham station of the New Haven railroad, the complainant being the head of the railroad police. The charge is believed to be an outgrowth of the campaign now in progress to bring the machinists employed by the New Haven road into a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

At a mass meeting held at Wells Memorial building, McMahon and Larkin, together with D. J. Collins, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Carmen, were the principal speakers. At the same time information was being received at all the large shop centers along the New Haven line. At the conclusion of the meeting McMahon declared that there was approximately 5000 workers on this road.

Fined $560 for Fire Menace in Roxbury

Charged with refusal to remove a fire menace near a United States postoffice, George Karafotus was fined $560 in West Roxbury court today by Judge A. J. Brackett. The fine is $5 for each of 112 days in which, fire officials say, he ignored warnings. He appealed and was held in $1000. The charge relates to 1859 Center st., where Karafotus owns an unoccupied building. In the yard, it was testified, are piles of old lumber, boxes and barrels.

2 HANG SELVES IN DORCHESTER

Two Dorchester men committed suicide by hanging in their homes today—despondent over ill health.

Walter C. Mullett, 51, of Bowdoin ave., who a week ago made an unsuccessful attempt by inhaling gas was found hanging in the dining room doorway by his wife, who had been absent from home for several hours.

Mrs. Mullett cut the body down and notified police and a physician, but Mullett was beyond aid, she told police he had been despondent over ill health.

Harry Brooks, 31, of Walcot st., was found hanging from a water pipe in the kitchen by his mother Mrs. Anna Brooks, when she returned from an errand. Brooks had been ill for about six years.

FREE 24 IN DEATH OF POLICE CHIEF

Gastonia, N. C., June 13—The list of prisoners held in connection with the slaying of O. F. Aderholt, Gastonia chief of police, in a clash with strikers dwindled to 47, when George B. Mason, city solicitor, withdrew warrants charging 24 men with assault with intent to kill and released them.

Thirteen of those still held are charged with murder and the rest with felonious assault.

The prisoners are all strikers from the Loray Mill or outside leaders who came to Gastonia to aid in the strike.

Among those against wh m murder charges have been filed is Fred Erwin Beal, Southern organizer for the National Textile Workers' Union. The woman charged with murder is Vera Bush, local union leader.

Rum Everywhere, But Nary a Drop to Drink

Chicago, June 13—Sentenced to 30 days at labor in jail for drunkenness, Joseph Charles, 40, and William Brown, 40, were given the task of legally destroying 800 pints of confiscated gin. The two men spent their first day carefully emptying each pint on the jail. Police officers looked on to see that all the liquor went down the sink.

CENSUS RESULT IN FAST TIME

Washington, June 13—Population statistics of the 1930 decennial census will be announced publicly in each of 500 districts immediately after they are gathered, instead of being tabulated first in Washington.

William M. Steuart, director of the census, explains that this procedure would be followed for the first time in order that inaccuracies may be detected before the figures are tabulated for the permanent record.

At least 100,000 enumerators will be needed to canvass homes, he says, and between 6000 and 9000 will be employed here later.

Selection of women for the job of enumerators is favored by the directors, because they usually are endowed with tact and are faithful in attending to details. The plan is to employ one enumerator for each 2000 estimated population.

On the basis of estimates of the average periodic increase in population of the country, it is believed that about 123,000,000 individuals must be listed for the new census.

3D OFFENSE BRINGS LONG SENTENCE

A little gray-haired 72-year-old Lynn mother faces the possibility of serving more than five years in jail for her third offense in a year against the liquor law.

Mrs. Hattie Lee of 74 Union st. today pleaded guilty on two counts and was given sentences totalling eight months and $500. If she fails to pay the fine—and she has no money—she must work out the fine at 50 cents a day, which represents 1000 more days.

The severity of the sentence made the woman appeal the case but she is in jail because she could not raise the $1500 bail set by Judge Reeve.

The 72-year-old convicted bootlegger referred to Capt. Arthur McDonald, who bought a pint of alcohol from her for $1. The sale was made in the woman's home, where another quart was seized.

The purchase was made by McDonald in plain clothes, and the woman did not recognize him as a policeman, for he is a young officer who looks like a college boy.

On each charge of keeping and selling liquor the woman was fined $400 and sentenced to four months in jail. These jail terms are to be concurrent.

The arrest was on information given on Mrs. Lee by another woman who was caught bootlegging, asked her reason for selling liquor, the woman is said to have told police that "Mrs. Lee told me to do it."

Although this is her third offense, the woman has served no jail term before. Unless some friend furnishes bail the aged woman will go to jail for several weeks until her appeal is settled.

Jury Clears Mother of 6 of Rum Charge

Mrs. Julia Burns, mother of six children, of Dell street, Somerville, was found not guilty of keeping and exposing liquor as a result of a sealed verdict returned by a jury in Middlesex Superior court which was opened before Judge Alfred E. Hayden in East Cambridge today.

A feature of the trial which lasted two days was that Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant, of the Somerville district court, who found Mrs. Burns guilty in the lower court, was called as a witness by the government against Mrs. Burns.

Another feature was the testimony of Somerville officers who told the court that water that they had taken from the bath tub in the Burns home which the Burns children used for bathing purposes and which the police had analyzed did not contain any alcoholic content. Most all of Mrs. Burns' children were with her in court today when the sealed verdict was rendered.

73 POLICE SEE PROMOTION IN NEW LISTS

Seventy-three members of the Boston police department today saw hopes for promotion encouraged through the annual list strength test—raised again to the heights with the issuance of new eligible lists for promotion to sergeant and lieutenant in the department.

The new lists, compiled after the strength were eliminated by Commissioner Eliot H. Goodwin, added 45 eligible for sergeant and 30 for lieutenant.

One of the most surprising changes was the appearance of the name of Mark Leonard of 125 Wrentham st., Dorchester, as No. 1 on the new list. His name had not appeared before.

George F. Weckbacher of 669 Walkhill st., Dorchester, won the top position on this list formerly occupied by Harrington B. Wyatt of 80 Canterbury st., Dorchester. The latter dropped to third. Sergt. Andrew J. Hurley of 1743 Commonwealth ave. heads the new list for promotion to lieutenant.

The examinations were taken on January 22 and those who took the test, 52 are eligible. The first list qualified 22.

WHO'S BEAUTY WINNER? ASKS SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, June 13—The mystery of the identity of Miss Massachusetts, who appeared to be Margie Barrell of this city, who won fourth prize at the international beauty contest at Galveston, Tex., continued to agitate local citizens today.

Dance hall patrons and attaches, theater managers and publicity feminine publicists were chary to comment, together with other judges of art their failure to reveal the scintillating beauty.

Also the history of the girl, it was learned, is unknown to the landlord of the rented room where she lived for just one week previous to the elimination contest, as well as to the management of the theater where they were held. To add to the complication the names of the judges could not be learned.

ALLEN QUIZZED IN TRIAL OF WIFE'S SUIT

Herbert S. Allen was subjected to a searching cross-examination in Suffolk probate court today by Atty. Edward A. McLaughlin, Jr., counsel for Mrs. Kathryn E. Allen, who is suing for separate support and custody of two children.

Disclosing by his reference to songs that he had received considerable attention between himself, his mother and his wife at their Commonwealth ave. home, Allen was bluntly asked by Atty. McLaughlin if the notes had been made in view of possible court action.

Allen replied that he never had any intention of bringing an action against his wife, but had hoped that the difficulties between them might be amicably settled.

Attorney McLaughlin sought to have the case brought within the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Curtiss vs. Curtiss, which decision ruled that acts or words are sufficient to constitute cruel and abusive treatment" by questioning Allen as to conversations between himself and wife.

Only one act of physical violence is charged by Mrs. Allen in her petition.

LT.-GOVERNOR FLEES IDAHO KIDNAPERS

Orofino, Ida., June 13 (AP)—Several thousand men and boys searched this mountainous country today for the four young bandits who abducted W. E. Kinne, Lieutenant-Governor of Idaho, and two men who attempted to rescue him.

Kinne escaped uninjured after he had been tied to a tree by his abductors. W. L. Tribbey, of an Idaho loan association, and Paul Kille, a lumber worker, attempted to rescue Kinne when the bandits halted his automobile. Kille was shot in the leg and clubbed over the head and Tribbey was badly beaten.

ROBBERY MOTIVE

Robbery and the theft of Kinne's automobile apparently were the motives for the abduction.

Kinne, traveling from Lewiston to his home here, was attacked by the bandits shortly after leaving Lewiston. They boarded his car and ordered him into the rear. Near Orofino, Kinne said, a front tire blew out and the automobile catapulted into a ditch bottom side up. No one was hurt.

ATTACK RESCUERS.

When Tribbey and Kille drove up they started to assist the wreck victims and were greeted with drawn pistols. In the struggle that ensued, Kille was shot in the leg and was battered into unconsciousness with a gun butt. The robbers then took Tribbey's car, loaded the three men in it and drove for the mountains.

After several hours of aimless driving they stopped near Greer, nine miles southeast of here, tied the men to trees, left one of their number of guard them, and drove away. Four hours later the three bandits returned, got their companion and drove away again. Kinne and his companions escaped in a few minutes. Kille, seriously but not dangerously hurt, was taken to a hospital here.

NO BILL FOUND IN EXCHANGE ST. INQUIRY

Dist. Atty. Foley. Shortly after a brief conference with him, that body announced its verdict.

No comment was made by Judge Hall as he relieved the jury from any further business this term. The men lingered in their room for an hour's social gathering, before going to their homes.

John J. Riley, foreman of the jury, refused to discuss the case.

Robert Bottomley was about to be called into the jury room as a witness when the hearing was so abruptly ended. He had been notified by telephone to appear and was in the corridor.

ASKS FOR HIS FEE

Bottomley asked for the usual fee allowed to witnesses, and received a check for $1.75 for his "travel" to the court building.

This "no bill" report brings to a close the long controversy over the widening of Exchange st. Among those who were to have testified was Mayor Nichols, but he did not receive a call from the jury.

The Finance Commission, in its report after a special investigation, had branded the land purchase as "being permeated with fraud," and suggested legislative redress for taxpayers.

This finding had been submitted by the Finance Commission to the Governor and Legislature, as the commission considered it useless to call upon the mayor and city law department to institute action."

WASTE OF MONEY CHARGED

The testimony heard before the commission disclosed the most flagrant case of waste of the taxpayers' money by public officials, brought to its attention since the commission was created," said the report.

The purchase of land for the widening cost Boston $1,750,000, and the commission charged that fraud was manifest in the price paid by the city, in the haste in which moves were made, in the urgency in which authority was asked and in misleading information given.

The finance commission in its report further scored the mayor by saying: "The mayor, who should have been the first person in the city to welcome any facts showing fraud on the taxpayers, when called before the commission, adopted an attitude antagonistic to the commission and its investigation."

FLAG WINNERS TO BE PICKED TONIGHT

prize in the contest, will be chosen from the eight finalists at the flag day exercises at the Capitol tonight. The eight finalists are:

Boys—Robert L. Sullivan, fourth region, Syracuse, N. Y.; Thomas Paul Dericks, eighth region, Pittsburgh; Merle M. Clarke, ninth region, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; and Ralph H. Agate, 10th region, Lafayette, La.

Girls—Mary McGonigal, third region, Troy, N. Y.; Elaine E. Conway, ninth region, Detroit, Mich.; Alma Groves, 12th region, Byronville, Va.; and Lupe Rivera, 15th region, Los Angeles, Calif.

MEET PRESIDENT

Before the selections were announced all the regional winners experienced one of the proudest days in their young lives when they were brought to the White House to meet President Hoover.

The President is honorary president general of the United States Flag Association. Since succeeding President Coolidge as honorary president general, President Hoover, for the first time, came into direct contact with an activity of the association.

Smiling and prompt, President Hoover came through the garden walk on the south lawn of the White House at exactly 12:59 p. m. The flag champions all were assembled, with Col. James A. Moss, president of the Flag Association.

President Hoover said:

"They are a cheerful lot of boys and girls."

Then, still smiling, he stood with the group about him while photographers and movie cameramen "shot" the scene.

TOUR WHITE HOUSE

After President Hoover left them, the regional winners were taken on a sightseeing trip around the White House lower rooms and the grounds, at the suggestion of Mrs. Hoover.

The First Lady of the Land could not herself meet the flag champions, but expressed her regrets through an emissary.

After the White House visit, the 36 boys and girls returned to their headquarters at the Mayflower Hotel where the names of the eight finalists were announced.

The ratings that the judges noted on the winning essays turned in by the four boys were as follows:

Robert Sullivan, 197.16; Merle M. Clarke and Thomas Paul Dericks, 195.66, and Ralph Agate, 194.66.

The girls had higher ratings and the four finalists among them were selected only after the most careful judgment. Their ratings were:

Mary McGonigal and Elaine Conway, 200; the highest possible rating; Alma Groves, 199.66 and Lupe Rivera, 199.

ATTEND BALL GAME

Arising at Griffith Stadium a half an hour before the game between the Senators and Indians started, the flag champions and their chaperones were greeted by Walter Johnson and "Goose" Goslin.

Today will be a day of rest for the group, a day that will enable the finalists to get themselves in the proper physical shape for the strenuous task tonight.

Then, at the Capitol, as part of the annual Flag Day exercises there, the four boys and four girls each will read their essays.

COOLIDGE FINDS WRITING IS NOT HIS CAREER

New York, June 13 (AP)—Calvin Coolidge, in an interview published in the New York World today, discloses that writing as a career has no appeal to him.

Mr. Coolidge, who was in New York for a meeting of the directors of the New York Life Insurance Company, was asked whether he liked to write.

"I don't," he said. "Oh, I don't find it so difficult to sit and write about something that I know very well, such as my own life, but a career of writing"—and he left the sentence unfinished.

The former President also disclosed all his writing is done in longhand. He said he had heard of persons who couldn't write a word unless they sat at their typewriters.

"They always said President Wilson had that habit," he added. "He would use just two or three fingers of his own machine. At least, that was the story about Washington. I don't know whether it was true or not."

Mr. Coolidge carried his left hand bound in a black silk handkerchief as a result of a sprain he suffered while fishing.

"I was trying to land a big trout," he said, "and in my excitement during the battle I slipped over a rock and hurt my hand. The doctor says it's a bad sprain."

Asked if he got the fish, he replied:

"Oh, yes, I landed him all right, and I guess he was worth it."

Near a Collapse

Indianapolis, Ind., June 13 (AP)—Said by his friends to be on the verge of physical collapse, Dr. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League, who recently served 60 days at the state penal farm for contempt of the Indiana Supreme Court, left today for a Michigan sanitarium.

EX-WIFE OF COY IS BRIDE OF A N. Y. BROKER

Savannah, Ga., June 13 (AP)—Horatio Seymour Shonnard, a stock broker of New York, and his bride, the former Mrs. Sophie Meldrim Coy, first wife of Edward H. (Ted) Coy, Yale football star, today were planning their honeymoon in Europe.

They were married here by Municipal Judge A. R. MacDonnell at the home of General P. W. Meldrim, the bride's father. After a few days in Savannah, the couple plan to go to Charleston, S. C., and will sail for Europe June 19.

Miss Mildrim, a Savannah girl, and Coy eloped and were married at Asheville, N. C., August 31, 1912. She obtained a divorce in Paris January 8, 1925, with custody of their two children.

The following August Coy married Jeanne Eagels, actress, who got a divorce at Chicago in 1928. A month later Coy and Miss Luttin Brunn of El Paso, Tex., were married.

Shonnard was divorced in Paris last July. He and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Joyce Shonnard had two children.

Mrs. Meldrim Coy was booked for transatlantic passage last Saturday, but cancelled the reservation at the last moment.

CANADIAN FLEES VERMONT JAIL; BARES 'PLOT'

Montreal, June 13 (AP)—The Montreal Gazette today published an account of a midnight dash across Lake Champlain in which Paul Denis, 55, was spirited away from Burlington, Vt., where he had been held in $10,000 in connection with an auto accident.

Denis said he was arrested on May 29 when he went to Burlington to testify at an inquiry into the collision near there on May 25 between his machine and one owned by Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thom, as of Farmington, Ct.

He said he was held in $40,000 bail, but this was reduced to $10,000. While in jail he became ill and was removed to a hospital.

Tuesday night he got his clothes, dressed in bed and was able to make his escape. He was met by friends, placed in a boat and taken across the lake, reaching home next day.

He asserted he was willing to face charges in the auto accident, but believed the bail exorbitant. He said occupants of the Thomas machine were not seriously injured, but were seeking $40,000 damages.

TELLS OF N. E. INDUSTRY'S ACTIVITIES

Detroit, June 13, in an address delivered before the Association of Reserve City Bankers holding its 18th annual convention aboard the steamship Sarnoan, off Detroit, Charles E. Spencer, Jr., vice president of the First National Bank of Boston, declared that "the first half of 1929 will go down as the most active period in New England's history.

Most of the industries in New England have been operating at almost full capacity, Mr. Spencer declared. The employment situation has been cleared up, and in some cases there has been a shortage of workmen. The summer decline will not affect all the industries because the increase of outdoor activities will be an offsetting feature.

Raw wool, cotton and hides have been consumed at an increasing rate since the first of the year, according to Mr. Spencer, and the shoe industry is on a comparatively favorable basis. The building trade has also shown an increase during the first months of the present year.

ROOSEVELT IS BACK WITH SKIN OF HUGE PANDA

San Francisco, June 13 (AP)—The skin of a giant panda, a cross between a raccoon and a bear, was en route to New York today in the possession of Kermit Roosevelt, who shot the animal in the dense Indo-China jungles during the Roosevelt Field Museum exhibition.

Roosevelt arrived here yesterday on the President McKinley and told of a three months' hunting expedition before the long-sought panda was bagged. The rare beast was the central object of the expedition which set out from India last December.

"A panda is something like a cross between a raccoon and a bear," Roosevelt explained.

"The small panda is rather a common little beast, but there is no other specimen of a complete giant panda in the world.

"This creature, which my brother, Theodore, and myself shot in the dense jungles of Indo-China, weighed about 200 pounds. He is a bear-like animal, but scientists have still to determine whether he is of the same species. He has 42 teeth, while the bear has only 40. And the panda doesn't hibernate."

Penitentiary Term Is Given to Eloper

Austin, Tex., June 13—A letter from the pretty 18-year-old Texas University coed with whom she fled from Austin six months ago, warning him to plead guilty or have her as a witness against him caused Jack Fleith, swimming instructor, to throw himself upon the mercy of the court. He was sentenced to 2½ years in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., for violating the Mann act.

Fleith and Miss Fannie Lee Sinclair were apprehended at New Bedford, Mass., following a search which began in January after they had left Austin in Miss Minter's automobile.

CROSS WILL FLY INTO AFRICA

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

Universal Service Special Cable. Copyright, 1929, Universal Service.

Berlin, June 13—A modern crusade having the sanction of the Pope to carry the cross by airplane into the heart of southwest Africa, will be led next spring by Father Paul Schulte, of Cologne. Captain Herman Koehl and Colonel James Fitzmaurice. Captain Koehl and Colonel Fitzmaurice with the late Baron von Huenefeld, flew the Roman from Ireland to Greenly Isle last year.

Father Schulte, who was a war-time pilot and who today is the only priest-pilot in the world, will not only be the spiritual leader of the religious air mission, but will divide the "trick" at the controls of their plane with the transatlantic air heroes.

Inspired by the death of his war-time buddy, Father Fuhrmann, who lies in a lonely grave near the edge of the southwest African desert, where he perished after arduous travel in establishing mission posts in the former German Southwest Africa, Father Schulte decided the missionaries must adopt modern means of travel.

After years of planning, he has succeeded not only in inducing the Junkers Works, Captain Koehl and Colonel Fitzmaurice to help him, but has obtained the official sanction of Pope Pius XI. Father Schulte belongs to the Oblate Father's and Founder's Association, the aim of which is to foster missionary work by means of modern transportation."

BARBARA FORBES TO BE BRIDE OF ARTHUR HALL, JR., TOMORROW

Reception at Home of Parents Follows Hamilton Ceremony

LIFE WILL BE FULL OF happy moments from now on for Barbara Forbes, who on the morrow will become the bride of Arthur Hall, Jr., at a simple 4 o'clock ritual in the little Episcopal Church at Hamilton. And tonight one of the happiest is to take place in the dinner-dance bridal-eve party arranged by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stuart Forbes for the bridesmaids and ushers and those who will help make the wedding one of the prettiest and most impressive of the season. The blazing brilliance of the North Shore Country Club will add to the sparkling merriment of the informal affair before the lovely Barbara solemnly delivers her vows to young Hall.

ONE TREE FARM, THE PARENTAL summer estate, will receive the guests, many of them from New York and Baltimore, following the ceremony, at a reception. And not much later will the heart-gladdened couple make their exit for a honeymoon in foreign lands. After September 1 they will be "at home" at Roslyn, Md. Four charming attendants Miss Barbara is to have in Miss Nell Todd Baldwin as maid of honor and Miss Virginia Gardner, Miss Evelyn Lanman of New York and Miss Ada Dunning of London, England, who is a house guest in the Forbes home until after the nuptials. From Baltimore will come six ushers to do the honors for their friend, Arthur.

BACK FROM SUNNY ITALY have Mrs. Vittorio Orlandini and her charming deb-daughter, Laetitia, returned in the past few days after an extended trip across the water only to make themselves in readiness for another trip in ten days which will take them to Squam Lake, New Hampshire, where they will while away the feverish heat of sun-kissed summer under the fanned spell of fresh-water breezes. When college closes for brother, Edward, he and Mr. Orlandini will join the feminine members of the family and add mental contributions to the formulation of debut parties for Miss Laetitia in the fall. She is one of the most attractive who in the cold weather will nod a compelling head of lustrous hair in glad acquiescence to rounds of festive-bud activities.

MANY HOUSE GUESTS WILL keep the Augustus F. Goodwins of Brackenside, Hamilton, busy over the week-end, particularly since Mr. Goodwin is president of the Eastern Horse Club and has many duties to perform on Saturday and Monday for the Country Club races at Brookline. I find among his distinguished visitors' list the Minister Plenipotentiary of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael McWhite, and Mrs. McWhite. They are to arrive in Boston by motor late in the afternoon and after a brief respite at the Ritz will continue on to the North Shore home of their host.

WHAT A PRETTY PICTURE a flowered chiffon dress, a picture hat and a charming girl make, especially when the bit of feminine loveliness is Martha Wigglesworth, tall, blonde and smiling. As she walked hurriedly across the Edward Wigglesworth Grew lawn at Juniper Hill, Dover, a pourer for the lawn party and debut tea for Miss Esther, her billows of printed chiffon trailed through thin air only to recede into the dim distance of green oblivion. Her egg-shell hose and shoes to match, her soft-tan hat completed the summer-symphony. And following close behind came the always-radiant Mrs. Paul Birdsall (Helen Grew) in blue silk dress, tan hat and hose and brown shoes.

THE GREW LAWN WAS velvety smooth, its evenness broken only here and there by white-clothed tables and a canopied board of palatable delicacies and thirst-quenching refreshments, livened by musically-toned voices. The never-ceasing motors rolled continuously before the Grew summer mansion, as countless gaily-dressed and laughing debs alighted, all to participate in the first debutante affair of the season. And rounds of rhythm provoking music and soft syncopation continued on in tan georgette and large black straw hat, Mrs. Grew received her guests. White and blue larkspur and salmon-colored gladiolas were but a few of the lavish floral decorations.

At a simple 4 o'clock ritual, Barbara Forbes will tomorrow become Mrs. Arthur Hall, Jr., in the little Episcopal church at Hamilton. But tonight an informal dinner and dance will make merry the eve of her wedding. (Bachrach photo.)

Boston Girl to Be Bridesmaid at New York Wedding

A BOSTON GIRL WILL BE bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Adele Katte Merrill and Charlton MacVeagh, which takes place next Saturday afternoon at St. Matthew's Church, Medford, New York. She is Miss Alice Palache of Cambridge. Miss Mary Elizabeth Houck of Bridgeport will also be an attendant. Next door to the church is Merlebrook, the home of the bride's parents, and following the ceremony will furnish the background for an elaborate reception. The bride is the daughter of the Edwin Godfrey Merrills, and will be wed in ivory satin trimmed with lace worn by her maternal great-grandmother. A veil of rose point lace, worn by Mrs. Wayne MacVeagh at the wedding of the present King and Queen of Italy when the bridegroom's grandfather was American ambassador at Rome, will be worn by Miss Adele as a gift of the MacVeagh family.

POLITE, HONEST BOY IS SOUGHT FOR GOOD JOB

Are you a "tall, polite, honest boy?

If so, here is a chance for a job for the summer.

Miss Frances A. Cobbett, who operates a candy and sandwich stand in the new Studio building, 110 Tremont st., wants a boy answering the above description and will put him to work at once. She communicated with the Employment Editor of the Boston Evening American after reading of the free offer of this newspaper to place employers in contact with high school and college boys and girls who desire summer vacation employment.

500 APPLY AT THEATER

Five hundred students applied at the Uptown Theater (formerly St. James) in Huntington ave., near Massachusetts ave., for the 22 jobs as ushers, porters, ticket takers and cashiers, offered through the medium of the Boston Evening American's service.

"I had no idea the response would be so tremendous," said Manager Harry Browning. "We have taken the names and addresses of all these applicants and will soon select our complete staff from them. The Boston Evening American certainly has wonderful pulling power."

FINE UPSTANDING BOYS

J. V. Barger, employment manager of Western Union Messenger Service, had a similar experience. He said: "I did not realize that a notice in any newspaper would have the pulling power of the one which appeared in the Boston Evening American, in connection with the offer of free employment service.

"Forty high school boys appeared in response to my request for 10 boys as messengers. The boys I hired were of a fine, high-grade type, and I am going to watch their advancement closely."

Clubwomen Working for Indian Welfare

THE Indian must be "Americanized," in the social service sense of the word.

If he is able bodied, he should work and not live upon the rentals of his land.

The fight for continued liquor suppression on the reservations must be continued.

These are but few of the beliefs of Mrs. Joseph Linden Smith of Dublin, New Hampshire, chairman of the division of Indian welfare of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Indian problem has become one of the most urgent and perplexing problems of the Federation.

To this end a comprehensive and salvaging plan is now being evolved by Mrs. Smith for action at the fall resumption of club activities. Mrs. Smith is a social registerite, who not many years ago was one of Boston's smart set leaders.

A resolution prepared by her and endorsed by Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar of Portland, Oregon, General Federation department of public welfare chairman, was passed at the recent Biennial Council meeting in Swampscott calling for additional appropriations from Congress for Indian service.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar

Such a demand will be pressed at the next session of Congress and such added funds will be sought by this division.

"The Indian problem is not only complex but a diversified one, different sections of the Indian country having entirely different needs," Mrs. Smith pointed out.

She stressed the emergency need for at least 200 additional nurses and 50 more doctors in various parts of the Indian country and for an adequate health program on the reservations.

In the past few years the General Federation has taken increased interest in the improvement of the American Indian, concentrating organized efforts on the preservation of Indian arts and crafts.

IN NATIVE COSTUME

The traditional beauty of the Indian is brought more poignantly home to the Federation executives by the charming presence of Mrs. Eugene B. Lawson of Tulsa, Okla., the Indian princess, second vice-president of the organization.

Incidentally, she appeared at the Midnight Frolic of the National Federation of Music Clubs convention and festival at the Hotel Statler, garbed in native costume, and sang many of the folk songs which she rendered in Swampscott a few weeks ago.

The condition of orphaned children is particularly pathetic, the division chairman declared.

HOME ECONOMICS ASSOCIATION

The Hotel Statler will house the 22nd annual meeting of this body, from July 1 to 5, with a public meeting the first session. The meeting is to be held jointly with the Fourth National Conference of Supervisors and Teachers of Home Economics called by the United States commissioner of education for that day.

Dean Margaret Justin of Kansas State Agricultural College and Dean John W. Withers of New York University, are to be the speakers. The banquet is planned to carry the members back to the time when, under the leadership of Ellen H. Richards of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston friends played so important a part in launching this movement to improve conditions of everyday living.

ALL-BOSTON WOMEN'S DEMOCRATIC CLUB

Tomorrow members and friends are to be entertained at a dinner and whist at the Food Craft Shop, 234 Newbury st., in the interests of the Democratic movement among the women of the city. The campaign of the fall is to be stressed. Co-operation and harmony are to be the slogan features.

Mrs. Katherine R. Clarke, president, is general chairman, and assisted by officers of the club, in charge of the arrangements. The women are Elizabeth Needham, Mrs. Margaret Delaney, Mrs. Margaret Hughson, Mrs. Mae L. Donovan, Mrs. Catherine Donahue, Mrs. Anna P. Daly, Miss Nora Foley, Mrs. Delia Goode Callahan, Mrs. Margaret R. Burke.

BETH ISRAEL HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, guest speaker at the Life Membership Luncheon of this 900-membership organization at the Pinehrook Country Club, stressed the need of further assistance of the Jewish women of the city to carry the budget of the out-patient department, for which their auxiliary was established.

With a $65,000 annual expense, the membership must be increased, she said, and urged the life members to inspire affiliation with this auxiliary by virtue of their own membership.

Mrs. Barron is honorary president of the body, having last year served at the head. She was instrumental in a tremendous membership increase during her administration. She was responsible for starting the life membership drive. The auxiliary is to conduct a heated membership campaign in the fall with 5000 members as its goal.

Mrs. I. K. Prager, president, presided at the luncheon.

WOMEN'S ITALIAN CLUB

The final event will be the bridge and whist party at the home of Mrs. Luigi P. Verde, 699 Adams st., Dorchester, next Wednesday. This is another gesture to increase the building fund of the club, to which all efforts have been devoted during the past year. Mrs. Delphiba Reppetto, the incoming president, painted great hopes for future accomplishments of the club at the annual luncheon.

OPERA TICKETS FOR CHILDREN AVAILABLE

The Boston Evening American still has several hundred tickets which are offered free to 5000 boys and girls who will be guests of the newspaper at the open-air presentation of Verdi's opera Aida at Braves Field, Thursday evening, June 27.

In order to get tickets children must submit letters of about 100 words on "The Value of Music," to the Aida Festival Editor of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

The principal role of Aida will be sung by Julia Peters, American soprano, whose rendition of the same role in Madison Square Garden, New York, a year ago, created a sensation. Mme. Elizabeth Hoerpel will sing the role of Amneris; the leading tenor will be Fernando Bertini; Amonasro, father of Aida, will be Ciro de Rita, baritone, and the high priest, Ramphis, will be interpreted by Miguel Santacana, basso from Mexico.

. . . that will carry boys' and girls' feet through the summer safely

. . . For too many children come back from vacation with feet in a wretched condition. And almost invariably, faulty footwear is the cause of it!

So Coward has created special shoes for vacation wear...based on 63 years' experience in the building and fitting of children's footwear. These shoes meet youth and summertime on their own footing. They're light, cool, flexible... but with enough discipline built into them to retain the foot in its natural shape and to keep the arch muscles from sagging. Fitted skillfully at Coward's, they are insurance against the usual complaint, "vacation feet."

CARES NORRIS TO 'REPEAT' POWER CHARGE

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Ira C. Copley, publisher of California and Illinois newspapers, in a statement submitted to the Federal Trade Commission, today challenged Senator Norris of Nebraska to "repeat on the street as facts" his charges in Congress that he was connected with public power utility interests.

Chairman McCulloch of the commission refused to let Copley either read the statement on the witness stand or to place it in the record. The chairman declared witnesses were "not permitted to come to use this place as a forum for debate with any other person." He added that Copley could testify to anything he wished about his case, if it dealt with the record of the commission's investigation into publicity activities of public power utilities.

DENIES NORRIS CHARGES

Appearing before the commission's investigation into publicity activities of public power utilities at his own request, the publisher in a lengthy statement not only denied the Nebraskan Senator's charges, but declared if they were expressed outside the "privileged" territory of the Senate he would "promptly bring him (Norris) before a court of justice."

Copley categorically denied he had financed the purchase of his newspapers with "so-called power trust money," that he was interested in power companies owned by Samuel Insull, the Illinois utilities magnate, and that he now owned any public power utility securities.

CHALLENGES SENATOR

Declaring that as an Illinois representative he had served with Senator Norris in the House, the publisher said he has regarded the Nebraskan "as a man actuated by the highest motives." He added, however, that the Senator "has been so entirely misinformed in this matter, and it is apparent from his comments in the (Congressional) record that he regards me a brand convicted, that I would like to offer this challenge through you to him."

"I would like to challenge Senator Norris," Copley continued, "to repeat on the street as facts the things which he has said in the Senate, branding them as rumors if is true, but nevertheless carrying the stigma.

ASKS TO BE INDICTED

"If he will state this outside of the privileged chamber of the Senate, I will promptly bring him before a court of justice."

If the commission or Senator Norris did not think his denial of the charges was true Copley declared, "I dare you or him to indict me." He added that he then would haves chance "before a federal court of justice to have this matter settled once and for all time."

Copley said the charge of his connection with the power industry, in particular with the Insull interests, was started "by a competing newspaper in Springfield, Ill."

Clash Over Salem B. & M. Signals

Opinions of Salem officials and an attorney of the Boston & Maine railroad on crossing protection in Norman st. clashed at a hearing today before the public utilities commission.

Gen. William Pew, city solicitor, and Michael F. McGrath, city councillor, asked that the road be required to maintain four instead of three flagmen, saying the Salem city council will not approve automatic signals. The commission took the case under advisement.

150 'NERVOUS WRECKS' TELL OF GUN CLUB

Residents of the district near the Waltham Gun Club feared for their safety, were unable to read, study, or use their radio sets and were becoming "nervous wrecks," because of the shooting at all hours by club members.

This was testified to by scores of residents who filled Newton District Court today at a hearing of a complaint against the club and two of its officers "for maintaining a public nuisance."

TURKEYS DIE.

George Bell of High st., Waltham, president, and Oliver J. Bunten of Moody st., Waltham, treasurer, were the two club officers. The principal complainant was Police Chief Bernard F. Burke of Newton. He was supported by 150 residents of the Auburndale section, where the club is located.

Chief Burke testified that he had investigated complaints filed with him since the club opened its season on April 15, and that the noise of the shooting "exceeded that of the noise of my motor."

He told Judge Fabian that he had ordered the "nuisance" stopped and shooting had been temporarily suspended.

John J. Leary of Stanford st., Auburndale, whose home is 400 feet from the range, said he raised turkeys, and that as a result of the "terrific noise" of the shooting, 21 turkey eggs about to be hatched had "died."

BULLETS THUD ON LAWN

"I'll be forced to sell my house and move from the district unless the intolerable noise is stopped," declared Mrs. Mary E. Birrell of Lexington st., Auburndale. The same statement was made by John F. Connolly of Lexington st.

Bullets "thudded" on his front lawn, his wife was in mortal terror, his children unable to study and even the dog was nervous, according to Fred P. Mellish of Stanniford st.

The shooting at the club was "one continuous series of loud explosions," according to Alderman Charles B. Floyd of Newton, whose home is nearby. He was unable to read or study in his own home, he said.

MAN IS HELD IN $5000 IN WELL POISONING

Following his arrest on a Plymouth grand jury indictment, Henry Litchfield of South st., Burrage, was arraigned in Plymouth today on the charge of poisoning a well. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000 for trial Monday at Brockton.

According to Hanson police, Alfred E. Drayton of Monponsett, on May 3 noticed a milky color to the water in his well. He notified police at Hanson and a sample of the water was taken.

Police say they found two large shoe boxes of poison in the well. The result of an analysis by George E. Bolling, city chemist at Brockton and by state chemists showed the water contained poison.

Drayton told police he and his two children testified against Litchfield in Abington court, where Litchfield was convicted on a liquor charge.

WARNS POLICE IMPOLITENESS IS BARRED

Police should never forget they are public servants, said Mayor James J. Roche of Everett today in a letter to Chief of Police William E. Hill of that city, in which he demanded courtesy to the public on the part of officers.

Mayor Roche said complaints had come to him regarding certain superior officers on desk duty, and warned that a repetition of these complaints would mean suspension for the guilty.

The letter, which was ordered read at all rollcalls said:

"Certain superior officers on desk duty have been guilty of indiscretions through want of courtesy to the public.

"Many complaints have been received at my office and my home. Such a letter as this to you should be needless. Police should never forget they are public servants and should always be courteous and gentlemanly in handling the desk work of the department.

"I shall not condone any such complaints in the future, and if this matter is treated lightly I will see the offenders are immediately suspended and given a chance to think over their indiscretions."

Despite his weight, Curran went after Wood and subdued him.

After hearing the story and following the plea of guilty Wood's case was placed on file.

DAWES TO VISIT KING, THEN SEE M'DONALD

London, June 13 (AP)—It was stated authoritatively today that Ambassador Dawes would travel to Scotland Sunday to meet Premier MacDonald at Forres, a little town 17 miles from Lossiemouth, where the Premier is spending a short vacation.

The new ambassador will be received by King George at Windsor Castle Saturday and present his credentials. This is necessary, according to the code observed by diplomats, which would not sanction an interview with the prime minister prior to presentation to His Majesty.

At Lossiemouth MacDonald told an interviewer: "We shall meet over the luncheon table and in three or four hours great questions of Anglo-American cooperation in the cause of disarmament and permanent peace will be opened."

It was said plans for the Premier's visit to the United States depended upon the message brought him by Dawes, who was assumed to have been authorized to convey a cordial invitation.

When he returns from Lossiemouth Dawes probably will speak at the dinner of the Pilgrims Club of London Tuesday night. There is general expectation of an important announcement from him on the trend of future relations between the Hoover and MacDonald governments.

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

FALL RIVER is a most embarrassing place for a poor man. It seems there is a bank every second door along North Main st., although official figures only account for 11.

But as the chief of the fire department, Jeremiah F. Sullivan, explained to the Boston Evening American representatives, the people of Fall River are frugal. They may not save a lot at one time, but they save consistently. And that's what counts.

Fall River rises up on a hill that has its base on the bank of the Taunton River. The city motto is "Well try." To anyone who has seen the city, that motto must have been suggested by a very modest man. Fall River not only tries, but does.

The most disastrous conflagration that ever swept the city caused the pessimists to add another ribbon of crepe to their black hats in 1928, but with courage that does them great credit, the people of the city immediately made plans to rebuild that part of the city destroyed, and today new buildings worth millions of dollars are springing up where a few short months ago there was nothing but blackened ruins.

A blaze of gold on a blue uniformed figure caused the American representatives to investigate as they meandered along Main st. Sure enough, it was Martin Feeney, chief of police who was checking up on the progress of traffic.

"I'm busy now, boys, but I'll see you later," said the chief after a two minute talk, in which he explained that Fall River was the most crime-free municipality in the state, if not in the country.

FEENEY has been a member of the department for 42 years, and his quick wit has prevented serious trouble many a time, especially during the times of strikes.

The chief was born in England, but he has a brogue that makes one suspect that there is blood of Irish kings in his veins.

"Here, I want you to meet these fellows," said the chief as a trio walked up the street. It happened that one of the group was W. Harry Monks, former mayor of the city. The only reason that the telephone poles didn't vote for Monks when he ran for mayor was that he didn't ask them. In explaining the Indian name of Fall River, Monks told the following story:

"Fall River is a name derived from the Indian Quequechan, which means falling water. The Indian name is hard to spell for some people. A new policeman here once found a dead horse on Quequechan st. But in making out his report, he couldn't spell the name.

"'How do you spell Quequechan?' he asked of the chief.

"'Find out for yourself or you're fired,' answered the police head."

The officer left the station and, after several hours, returned.

"Where have you been?" demanded the chief.

"Over moving the horse to Pleasant st.," replied the officer.

EDWARD T. MURPHY, former district attorney of Bristol County, was also in the party. Murphy is a graduate of Holy Cross and Harvard.

For the past 10 years Fall River has shown a marked decrease in the death rate, especially among infants. Dr. Ernest M. Morris has had much to do with the decrease but, as he is the city's health officer, he thinks it is just a part of his work. Dr. Morris is a graduate of Brown and McGill University, Montreal. He was a captain in the medical corps during the war and believes that the right kind of propaganda will help the people of the city in keeping disease down to a minimum.

Dr. Morris' greatest achievement in his three years as head of the health department was the adoption of a plumbing code which has been recognized by medical authorities all over the world and has been recommended by experts to the government of South Africa.

"But don't give me all the credit," said Dr. Morris. "Michael J. Breen, our inspector of plumbing, has had a large share in the work we are doing, and so has Bernard V. Murphy, his assistant. To mention a few of the things we are doing, Fall River has the best supervised sanitary conditions for meat and milk in the State. We issue a monthly bulletin to the people of the city explaining what we are trying to do and why, and furnish medical advice to school children and their parents that is bound to react to the better health of our citizens."

FRANK W. DUNHAM, secretary of the Fall River Chamber of Commerce, is a busy individual. He is trying to "sell" Fall River industry. He works day and night for seven days in the week trying to bring new industries to the city. He laughed when asked his hobbies.

"I guess trying to help the city is my hobby," he remarked. And it is.

Mayor Edmond Talbot is another of the city's modest boosters. He knows the city and the city knows him. He served as mayor from 1925 to 1927 and was elected last fall for a two-year term. Talbot is the father of eight prospective voters. He is a great radio fan, and likes to attend baseball games when his time permits.

Simeon Chase, called the "grandfather" of the textile industry, is a resident of Fall River.

So is Jim Tansey, described as one of the fairest and most level-headed labor union leaders in the country.

When the American reporter left Fall River, he thanked Providence that he was not born an Indian. Without looking, he could never spell Quequechan. Nor could he even pronounce it. But he can spell Fall River, and Fall River spells progress.

CLUB PRESENTS $1000 CHECK TO HOSPITAL

A check for $1000, the gift of the 100,000 boys and girls of the Boston American boys' and girls' Lindbergh Club, was presented to George von L. Meyer, secretary of the Children's Hospital of Boston, late yesterday in the office of the Lindbergh Club.

This money was raised in pennies of contributions by children from all over New England. It was originally the intention of the Boston American Lindbergh Club to buy a silver replica of "The Spirit of St. Louis" to present to Col. Lindbergh and his bride as a wedding gift. When Col. Lindbergh heard of this he asked the Boston Evening American not to buy a wedding gift but to give the money to the Children's Hospital of Boston.

The $1000 will purchase a Founder's Share in the new contagious ward of the Children's Hospital. This share will cover the cost of one room which will be dedicated as the "Lindbergh Room."

A bronze tablet telling how the boys and girls of New England, who, as members of the Boston American Lindbergh Club made this room possible, will be erected in the room.

In accepting the check, Meyer expressed his thanks to the Lindbergh Club, saying:

"It is with sincere gratitude that the Children's Hospital of Boston accepts the check for $1000 as a subscription for a Founder's Share in the contagious ward that is to be erected.

"The Boston Evening American is to be congratulated on the formation of this club under the leadership of the hero of the age, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

"Fitting it was that he should have diverted these pennies from a gift to himself to a children's hospital, and gracious it was of the Boston American Lindbergh Club to carry out his wishes to help the Children's Hospital, which is the leader in this field.

"The Children's Hospital through the Boston Evening American, thanks the boys and girls for their generous gift of a subscription for a Founder's Share in the contagious ward."

In announcing the presentation of the $1000 to the Children's Hospital, the Boston American Lindbergh Club also wishes to acknowledge the receipt of 50 cents from Allen C. Parsons, 14 Virginia ter., East Lynn, who contributed the money to be used for ice cream for the first boy or girl patient to occupy the "Lindbergh Room" at the Children's Hospital.

Another letter received from a member of the Boston American Lindbergh Club, which will give the boys and girls an idea of what happiness their pennies will bring to the children in the hospital was received from Teddy Rosenberg, 259 Revere boulevard, Revere. It says:

"Three cheers for you and the Children's Hospital. Believe me, Lindy would cheer, too, if he knew that hospital like I do.

"I've got diabetes and have had the 'cold' disease five years, got hypodermics and have to be on diet and can't do a lot of things other boys do. So I spent many months of each year in this hospital.

Death Gives 'Diploma' Life Denied Her

Chicago, June 13 (AP)—Death has given Thelma Brewerton the diploma life denied. It seemed cruel that she should have died after she had worked so hard—but that is death.

A university education beckoned s— to the Clarence, Mo., girl four years ago. There was not enough money to send her to the University of Chicago, but Thelma Brewerton was willing to earn her degree. For four years she was a waitress, a checkroom girl, a rooming house keeper, a candy clerk, earning her way through school.

Last Friday there came a letter from the university. She lacked one hour's credit, it said. She could not be graduated.

Tuesday was convocation day—day of days for her classmates, day of poignant grief, bitter disappointment for Thelma. Her heart was weak and doctors had warned her against over-exertion, but she did that on this day she must get away, to be alone.

She went to the Indiana sand dunes. Disregarding caution, she climbed the steep hills and raced across the sands. She came back to Chicago weak, sick, broken.

Then she died. Heart trouble, the doctors said—excitement, overexertion.

PROHIBITION RULING HITS SLEUTHS

Prohibition enforcement in this district got a jolt here today when the local United States Circuit Court of Appeals decided federal sleuths were barred from acting in the dual role of prohibition officer and internal revenue agent.

The conviction of Anton Kemp of Springfield, indicted on evidence obtained by an internal revenue warrant in the hands of a prohibition agent, has been overthrown and a jail term of two years and a fine of $2500 automatically stayed.

The circuit court opinion says "a prohibition officer is not an internal revenue officer," and denies the right of a United States commissioner sooner to issue an internal revenue warrant to a prohibition sleuth.

The unanimous decision of the circuit judge, if upheld, would invalidate a regulation issued by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in 1927 conferring internal revenue powers on the federal dry forces.

"If a United States commissioner is authorized under Section 3462 of the Revised Statutes to issue a warrant to a prohibition officer to enforce the Prohibition law," the opinion reads, "it does not follow that he is authorized to issue one to a prohibition officer to enforce the internal revenue laws."

Prohibition officials today admitted the opinion of the circuit court, if upheld, would radically curb enforcement policies.

Asst. Attys. Elihu D. Stone and John V. Spaulding, who argued the Kempf case before the appellate bench, today expressed their intention of carrying it to the Supreme Court of the United States.

GOOD IN PLEA FOR CADETS TO OBEY LAWS

West Point, N. Y., June 13 (AP)—Secretary of War James W. Good told the graduating class of the United States Military Academy today that one of their greatest opportunities for service will be the voluntary observance of the laws of the state in which they live and "of the nation whose laws you will take oath to obey."

An army officer's life is no longer confined to military duties, Secretary Good said, but the times are making many varied demands upon the officers; the government is using the army officer more and more at home and abroad as its representative and realizes he makes a tactful and capable agent.

"In the performance of his varied tasks it is imperative that he establish bonds of common purpose with his fellow men in civil life, remembering that 'when we assume the soldier we do not lay aside the citizen,' said the secretary. "This first consideration must always be national defense, but that does not preclude a rational participation in the life of the community and a sincere interest in its problems and projects.

"The habit of observance of domestic law will breed respect for international obligations. Yours is a profession which upholds and reinforces peace. Therefore any opportunity for service lies before you than the voluntary observance of the law."

AWNING FIRE JAMS SQUARE

There was considerable excitement in Harvard sq. district at noon today after an awning outside Charley's Lunch on Boylston st burst into flames. A carelessly tossed cigarette stub was the cause.

The fire alarm was rung but when the apparatus arrived the square was so blocked with auto traffic that difficulty was experienced in reaching the fire.

Hundreds of Harvard students thronged to the scene, their presence and their yells adding to the confusion. Before a stream could be played on the blazing awning the heat from it cracked the large plate glass window of the lunch room.

Boy Who Got the Crop In Lands Big Job

Washington, June 13 (AP)—The boy who took in the crops out in Iowa while affairs of the State Department waited for two weeks, made good.

Fred G. Heins of Alma, Mo., today found himself promoted from a clerkship in the State Department at $1860 a year to the position of confidential secretary to Gov. Dwight Davis of the Philippine Islands at a salary of $7500 a year. Governor Davis asked all the departments to submit candidates for the position and picked Heins after interviewing hundreds of applicants.

When notified of his appointment to the State Department in 1923, Heins waited back, "Can't come for two weeks, must take in the crops."

He was then working on a farm in Iowa. He has a perfect record in the division of foreign service administration in the State Department.

They are Richard H. Mooney, together, principal and supervisor in the public schools of Worcester since 1862, retired since 1926 after 45 years of active and uninterrupted service, and John F. H. Mooney, former newspaperman and insurance agent.

CHURCH PEACE NEWS THRILLS MEXICO

Mexico City, June 13 (AP)—Advices from Washington indicating that actual agreement had been reached here on the much-mooted Mexican religious controversy, and that communications asking papal sanction to the agreement had been forwarded to Rome, stirred this capital today.

No official announcement was forthcoming, but there was reason to believe that the meeting of President Emilio Portes Gil and Dwight Catholic prelates merely initiated months of pico negotiations in which the basis for settlement had been reached.

It is authoritatively reported it was said this basis was mutual consent for a broad interpretation of the constitutional religious laws, a settlement of which in 1926 led to the ex-regate's order withdrawing priests from the churches. Such an agreement, it was pointed out, would involve concessions by both the Mexican government and the church.

The same source said the Vatican probably would act quickly and satisfactorily on the agreement. It was pointed out as extremely unlikely Mgr. Hellrich would defer the matter, as it was understood happened on two previous occasions when negotiations looking to settlement came to a head.

Wife Takes Boxing Lessons in Vain, He 'K O's' Her

Chicago, June 13 (INS)—Mrs. Amelia Ducharme took boxing lessons for a month so she might be able to defend herself from her husband's fists, but it didn't help at all, she recited in her suit for divorce today.

She got discouraged after losing three bouts, the last by a knockout, she said.

Charles Ducharme, the mate, pebbled after five years of married life at the terms of their companionate union whereby he was to visit her but once a year, and took to pummeling her, she charges. Ducharme's income was given as $10,000 a year.

Temperance Leaders Should Use Dry's Tactics in Fight for Modification, Says Salmon Plan

Act for Liquor Control to Follow Reshaping of Amendment

TEMPERANCE WITHOUT PROHIBITION

By THOMAS K. SALMON.

THE course of events will eventually make it necessary for the American people to decide between prohibition without temperance or temperance without prohibition. The plan outlined in this article is an attempt to show how the latter alternative may be achieved. In formulating the plan, consideration has been given to three fundamental questions: the legal issues involved in changing the prohibition laws, the method to be employed in bringing about a change, and the form of a substitute for prohibition.

As long as the 18th Amendment remains in the Constitution in its present form, any attempt to liberalize the provisions of the Volstead act will be of doubtful constitutionality. Congress can alter the present definition of an intoxicating beverage; but any definition which excludes light wines and beverages that are intoxicating in fact, will necessarily be held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

Nullification, which is favored by many opponents of prohibition, is a dangerous experiment that might easily lead to disastrous results. If the present enforcement acts were repealed, traffic in liquor would follow, but it would be an extralegal traffic, entirely outside of the domain of law. Congress could not constitutionally enact regulations governing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages because that is prohibited by the Constitution. The absence of any enforcement act would produce far graver abuses than exist now.

The first step in any program for securing a substitute for prohibition must be the modification of the 18th Amendment; its repeal being practically impossible. Modification is possible, for it is almost axiomatic in politics that a positive proposal is often successful, where a negative proposal, with the same end in view, usually fails.

With the addition of the qualifying clause, "except as provided for by regulations prescribed by Congress," to the 18th Amendment, there would be no constitutional obstacle to the enactment of a substitute for prohibition, more in accord with enlightened public sentiment. Congress and the Supreme Court have tacitly recognized the principle embodied in such a clause by permitting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages for medicinal and sacramental purposes.

SECURING MODIFICATION

There is no magic formula that can be invoked to bring about the modification of the 18th Amendment as suggested in the foregoing paragraph. It is largely a question of practical politics and will require considerable time, money and effort to accomplish it.

Taxation on the manufacture of intoxicating beverages on the basis of alcoholic content.

Sale of intoxicating beverages to adults only by licensed liquor stores that not for consumption on the premises under licenses issued by the Internal Revenue Department to reputable individuals or concerns.

Sale of intoxicating beverages by hotels and restaurants (for consumption on the premises only) under licenses issued by the Internal Revenue Department to hotels and restaurants holding a permit from their local community to conduct such sales.

CONCLUSION

Importation of intoxicating beverages by licensed liquor stores, hotels and restaurants, and individuals (for their own consumption) when entry is made through regular customs channels and a tax on the basis of alcoholic conten., similar to that paid by domestic manufacturers, is paid together with an ad valorem duty for protection against too severe foreign competition.

Imposition of suitable penalties for violations of the law.

Temperance, which will eventually be attained through education, has been greatly retarded in its growth under the present prohibition laws. Better actual temperance conditions would be secured under the substitute for prohibition, outlined in this article. The ease in obtaining alcoholic beverages and the sliding scale of taxation on beverages of greater alcoholic content would tend to decrease the consumption of highly intoxicating beverages.

The plan also has several other advantages. Enforcement would be simpler because of the smaller number of violations that would occur. Less encouragement would be offered to crime because the bootlegger and the speakeasy would cease to be national phenomena. Finally, it would mark the abandonment of the abortive policy of coercion that has outraged and violated the fundamental rights and personal liberties of American citizens.

Cub Gets $1000

Thomas Kingerlee Salmor

Anti-Saloon League's Strategy May Be Turned Against It by Voters Forming Local Groups

Fortunately, the political strategy by which it may be accomplished has already been worked out by the Anti-Saloon League in its efforts to prevent any amelioration of the prohibition laws.

The method is successful and should be adopted by the anti-prohibitionists. It is based on the fact that in every voting district in the country there are two large groups of voters, one of which will vote the Republican ticket and the other the Democratic ticket, regardless of the qualifications of the candidate. The balance of power is, therefore, held by a numerically small group who will swing their votes to the candidate endorsed by the league.

To bring about the modification of the 18th Amendment and the enactment of a sane substitute for prohibition, there should be formed in every voting district of the country a group of voters pledged to support only anti-prohibition candidates for Congress and the state legislatures. The group in each district should be large enough to hold the balance of power.

A national committee, with representatives from all sections of the country should be formed to secure the enrollment of the groups of voters described in the preceding paragraph. Such a committee should also endeavor to co-ordinate the activities of the various organizations seeking modification of the prohibition laws. It will also be necessary to continue the publicity against the evils of the present prohibition regime.

LIQUOR CONTROL ACT

After the modification of the 18th Amendment, the Volstead Act and other laws relating to prohibition should be repealed. A new liquor control act should be enacted in their stead. Such an act should provide for the strict control of liquor by the Federal Government and should embody the following provisions:

Manufacture of intoxicating beverages under permits issued by the Internal Revenue Department to reputable individuals or concerns.

REPORTER WINS TEMPERANCE PRIZE FAME

By CARLETON BRYANT CLYMA,
Copyright, 1929, by New York American, Inc.

New York, June 13—This is the first-told tale of a fledgling reporter of the New York American who sprang into whispered fame overnight.

A real story of newspaper life as it rarely exists—what dramatists strive for in the plot essentials for newspaper plays, but never achieve.

Out of the clash of competing wits at the conclusion of the exciting Hearst Temperance Contest there emerged, for the attention of its judges, a romantic episode.

Thomas K. Salmon, the cub reporter in question, with a sedate turn of mind and an eye to the main chance in the $25,000 prize competition plus the subsequent generosity of William Randolph Hearst, contributed to make the background of the best newspaper office story in many years. Now it can be told.

Salmon's temperance plan is accorded national attention today, and Salmon is richer by $1000. O. Henry might have written such a story.

Thomas K. Salmon graduated from Cornell, class of '24. While there he dabbled in newspaper work and was connected with two student publications. In November, 1926, he joined the city staff of the New York American.

WORKED THREE MONTHS

It is, of course, custom and tradition that no employe, or relative of an employe, can enter any competition sponsored by the Hearst newspapers or any other Hearst publications. Ignorant of this, due to the fact that he was a newcomer, Salmon became interested in the Hearst $25,000 Temperance Prize Contest and made preparations to enter a plan.

He attacked the problem presented by the contest in the manner of a college-trained investigator and research worker.

All this took time, three months in fact, but the plan was ready for entry in the closing weeks of the contest.

In the final examinations it was grouped with the best 58 plans before the judges at the Hotel Warwick, for final consideration. At this point, like the others, it had been retyped and then printed, with every mark of identification removed. It was no longer the Salmon plan. It was merely plan No. 16,939.

PLAN RULED OUT

With the plans before the judges, and decision expected at any hour, the work began of identifying the writers of the 58 plans, among which the winning plans were certain to be found. "Who's who," city directories, telephone books and the files were consulted. None of these sources shed any light on the writer of plan No. 16,939.

During the contest in the manager suggested that a young reporter on the New York American might be the writer. Then the chance that his theory was looked into. Salmon's initials and his address were checked. It was learned that he had submitted a plan. The powers-that-be were notified as was Salmon. The judges were quickly notified. And plan No. 16,939 was eliminated. A judge's copy still bears the cryptic notation in Archdeacon Joseph R. Donahon's handwriting, "W. R. H. Emp.—out—J. H. D."

Simultaneously, reporter Salmon did some quick and serious thinking. In a brief note he withdrew from the contest his plan, the work of three-months' study and effort.

The withdrawal was read by the judges, making a favorable impression. The judges, meantime, continued their work, and in due time arrived at a decision. Prizes were awarded, handsome checks were presented.

But the unusual facts—that a cub reporter, in the stiffest of competition, had submitted one of the 58 best plans out of 71,248—were something to be considered. In due time Mr. Hearst was advised of the young reporter's effort. "Present the reporter with $1000" were the instructions.

Thomas Kingerlee Salmon was born in Brewster, N. Y., October 15, 1900. That inheritance counts is evident. His father, the late Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, was one of America's leading psychiatrists, director of the national committee for mental hygiene, brigadier-general, U. S. A., head of the psychiatric division of the American Expeditionary Force, and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by Congress.

Salmon's grandfather was Dr. Thomas Henry Salmon, a well-known English surgeon. Thomas Salmon's maternal grandfather was Edwin Ashley, member of the New York State board of regents and head of the public school system of Albany, N. Y.

Thomas K. Salmon was educated in the public schools of Boston and New York, at Loomis Institute, Windsor, Ct., and at Cornell University.

The Muskokas is that stretch of country between the Severn and French rivers, bound on the west by the Georgian bay and on the east by lakes and rivers and the great hunting and fishing grounds of the Algonquin Indian tribes.

It is a natural playground of rugged beauty, and attracts thousands from all over the continent. Its charm is ever upon those who visit it. Families from Washington and Pittsburgh who started "summering" here 20 years ago, live the winters in anticipation of returning in summer.

The memories are of days of freedom from turmoil and of sunshine and beautiful lakes, gurgling streams and merry friendships.

Lying north of Lake Ontario 100 miles, reached by two railways and wonderful motor roads, it is a paradise at frontier doors. On seeing Muskoka first, one is struck by the large number of luxurious launches and palatial summer homes which fly the American flag beneath the British, signifying the American nationality of the owners. And it is gratifying, in conversation with these people, who are persons influential in their own land, to learn their friendship and admiration for Canada as the country of their adoption for the summer.

TOUR BY STEAMER

To persons not previously acquainted with the scenic beauty of the Muskokas a tour by steamer is a revelation of a wonderful world of dancing waters threshing musically among innumerable islands which rear themselves, wild and majestic, in unexpected vistas and form everywhere playful little bays and narrow channels, through which the steamer glides, precariously close to rocky bluffs on either hand.

One of the most popular trips is the one from Muskoka Wharf on the lake steamer Sagamo, which makes a round trip, occupying the entire day, calling at numerous summer hotels on the three larger lakes, Muskoka, Rosseau and Joseph.

On the return trip one reaches the last mile of water on the cruise just as the sun is sinking in the gold and saffron chromo, typical of Muskoka sunsets, which tings the very waves beside the ship with prismatic color.

Summer sports of all kinds maintain their ancient kingdom in Muskoka, and one gets back to nature as did the Indian and ancestral man. Swimming, fishing, canoeing, golfing, all have their devotees. For the angler, pickerel and bass are biting.

The Western Rockies call to give their holiday joys. In East and West the seas beckon. Those who have drunk deep of the delicious air of the Muskokas, sailed over the Northland lakes, fished in the clear-water streams, and gazed from the hills of Milford, Rosseau and Humphrey hills, must admit the fascinating of Ontario's playgrounds.

SMILING WATERS

Muskoka is a great holiday center, and is conscious of a future splendor none can forecast. Muskoka is happy, and gives happiness at small cost to her visitors. There are no weary Sahara, no adventuring deals, but just smiling waters, sports aplenty, and the best of good things to eat.

Muskoka was known for its attractions as a holiday resort and as a fishing and hunting ground more than 80 years ago. This was several years before the Canadian National Railways had reached Gravenhurst, when, in fact, the end of the steel road was at Barrie. Several adventurous spirits, seeking recreation, travelled over the newly-built line to Collingwood and to Penetanguishene, and then by boat to Muskoka lake, by way of the Musquosh river, and pitched their tents near where Beaumaris is today.

No place in Ontario is so famed, so alluring and so popular as Muskoka. The Highlands are inseparable from thoughts of holiday. And who, with a holiday on his hands, could choose a more suitable region, close to his reach, and yet so filled with the joy and sparkle of life?

A ten-day-all-expense tour of Canada, including Muskoka lakes, can be made for less than $150.

MAKES AZORES IN SAIL BOAT

Paris, June 13—A dispatch from Horta, in the Azores, announced that Alain Gerbault, the former tennis star who is sailing around the world alone in a small boat, arried there. Friends received a telegram signed with his name and saying:

"All well. Will leave here next week."

It was pointed out that Horta was on a direct course which he would logically follow in order to profit by the southwesterly winds prevailing at this season in shaping his course for the English channel.

Brockton, June 13—Master Carpenters and the Carpenters' Union have agreed, through committee, on a contract to run for a year, with a 40-hour working schedule of five days a week and wages to remain as at present, $1.15 an hour.

The proposed agreement will be acted upon by the two bodies next week. The working schedule for the following year is left open, as is the matter of wages, it being understood that the journeymen will seek an increase of 10 cents an hour a year hence.

MANY TO VISIT ST. LAWRENCE

L. E. P. Pringle, general passenger agent of the Canadian National Railways states that never before in the history of their office had there been so many inquiries for reservations and information about the eastern section of Canada.

Few people realize that now one may leave Boston every morning on an up-to-date radio equipped train like the Ambassador or every evening in a deluxe compartment sleeping car train like the New Englander, and then travel comfortably and quickly to any one of 200 interesting resorts comparatively nearby.

Taking either one of these trains one may step off at the interesting city of Montreal, drop down to the historic city of Quebec, run out and see the Montmorency Falls, visit the well known Ste. Anne de Beaupre, and other equally interesting spots, then take the Canadian National train down to Murray Bay, the Newport of Canada, where ex-President Taft had been a noted visitor for many years, and if desired, there take a steamer up the famous Saguenay river.

If one prefers they may take the same railroad along the south shore of the St. Lawrence river, noting out of the car window most interesting French settlements with scores of stations where one may drop off for a few days trout fishing, if one is so inclined.

Trio of Excursions to End New York-Boston Season

The week-end waterway trips to New York now leaving Boston Fridays via Colonial Line, will terminate on June 28, but there still remains three more opportunities to make this delightful trip this year, June 14, 21 and 28.

In preparing these trips, the Colonial Line has provided every detail for the comfort and enjoyment of its patrons. One may travel from Boston to Providence by either rail or motor coach. At Providence connections are made with commodious steamers of the line, departing at 7 p. m. daylight saving time.

The special excursion rate of $18.50 includes round-trip fare, meals on steamer, stateroom, hotel room, sight-seeing trip, etc. A complete itinerary folder may be had on application to the Colonial Line office, 1 State st., Boston.

HARVARD GRADS CHARTER BOAT

In conjunction with the 30th anniversary program of the Harvard Class of 1899 the committee has arranged a feature which is decidedly new in the annals of the alumni celebrations. For the first time Lake Bras d'Or, the Grandes Dames of the Eastern Steamship Lines fleet has been chartered for a Tuesday jaunt, leaving Boston on June 20 at 5 p. m. for New London. The party will consist of over 2000 persons including members of the class, their wives and families.

Special entertainment has been made by the officials of the Eastern Steamship Line, who are cooperating with the committee and also considerable effort is to have the steamer Bras d'Or moored in an especially favorable spot on the Thames river so that all persons aboard will be able to have a splendid view of the Harvard-Yale races. The ship will be berthed just above the submarine base at New London.

The ship is equipped with a special built dance floor in the forward saloon and an orchestra will be provided. Henry Eaton chairman of the alumni committee states that members of the class are coming from points all over the country to attend this celebration. Arrangements for this special trip have been in charge of Henry Eaton and Allston Burr, who are representatives of the committee with Arthur B. Bates, agent of the Eastern Steamship Lines.

SCOTLAND TOUR ONE OF BEAUTY

"I dare say most strangers to Scotland will be surprised," says Charles Davey, New England passenger agent of the Cunard Line when I say that, knowing Scotland well, the ideal center I recommend to the tourist who wants to see a maximum of the diversified Highland and Lowland and sea coast scenery and the most interesting places in Scotland is—Glasgow.

"The city not only is accessible directly from New York and just over night from London, but it is easily and comfortably within reach of any part of England or Scotland. For one-day excursions you will have a bewildering choice between breakfast and dinner you will be able to go to beautiful Loch Lomond and take the lake steamer trip. Or you can take the train to Callander, drive through the Trossachs to Loch Katrine and to Loch Lomond on the way back.

"Down the waterway by steamer along the Firth of Clyde will take you to Campbeltown, a quaint old village known to Burns and Scott. From Glasgow a steamer leaves at 10 a.m. daily for the heart of the Scott Country at Burns Country, according to weather conditions. A steamer will leave Glasgow at 9 a.m. for Oban and through the Caledonian Canal so that you can spend a week end in the Highlands before returning to your headquarters.

Speed Up Missouri Pacific Texas Flier

The Missouri Pacific Line, Boston office announces that effective last Sunday, the schedule of the Texan, their fast non-extra fare Texas flier, leaves St. Louis at 2 p. m. instead of 2:50 p. m. and will leave Memphis at 7:15 p. m. instead of 7:30 p. m. arriving Dallas at 8:05 a. m. and Fort Worth 9 a. m. the following morning.

This provides earlier arrival in both of the cities mentioned and will allow ample time for connection with fast trains from Eastern cities at Union Station in St. Louis.

Excursion to Old Orchard June 16, 30

Old Orchard Beach, long famous as a seashore resort, and now more than ever familiar to the public through the activities of fliers who find its wide stretch of hard packed sandy beach ideal for landing and taking off, will be the destination of popular reduced fare excursions by train to be operated on Sundays, June 16 and 30, by the Boston & Maine Railroad.

The excursion train to Old Orchard will leave North Station at 8:25 a. m. Eastern Standard Time and on the return will leave Old Orchard at 6:10 p. m. The round trip fare is but $2.50, with half fare for children.

The SCARLET LADY

by Winifred Van Duzer

A SIX-DAY STORY

Thrilling Six-Day Novel by a Noted Author

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Penelope Reed, nineteen, a student at Oberon College elopes with Ted Beach after a party at a cabaret, the Three Owls. Steve Farraday, also on the party, is cared for by Myrtle Corbin, a singer at the cabaret. Steve goes to South America. Penelope and Ted start housekeeping in a bungalow at Lakeview, and Penelope gets discouraged because she cannot have all the things which she was used to before marriage. She makes the acquaintance of Mrs. Norris, who introduces her to delicatessen meals. Steve returns and goes to see Myrtle. Penny adopts Mrs. Norris's tactics and Ted is puzzled. Myrtle leaves the Three Owls and obtains a position in a gown shop, from which she is discharged when one of the girls informs the manager of her past. Penelope runs away to her mother, but her father lays down the law and she returns to Ted. He asks her to bring some papers to the office and Mr. Ford, his employer, seems greatly taken with her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 4

STEVE left the little flat that Sunday evening which Myrtle believed—unless fortune turned—would be their last together, and she never suspected a change in his feeling for her.

A tall, jaunty fop whose shoes even hushed as the mop of light brown curls dropped when he said good-night, she was too concerned with trying to furnish what the next few day would bring forth to see any small difference in his manner even had she been looking for a difference, which she was not.

Steve was twenty-two, only a year younger than herself, yet there were times when she looked upon him as a kid.

Myrtle was becoming convinced that opportunity was not for her; that the new life she had dreamed of, vainly but happily, was closed to her. All her buoyancy went out in gloomy fatalism. Upon her like a specter, leering at her hopes with a gibbering "What's the use?" A girl hopes wrong and it looked as if that were the end, the wrong beginning . . . Especially in a place like Clifton, where everybody knew everything about one—at least everything harmful.

If she could get out, go to Chicago or New York! She might have done that a few weeks back before her money was spent. Now there was only enough to buy food and pay carfare a few days more.

Back to Sam's place; nothing else to do. Perhaps Jurk would come her way on some distant, happy day. Only maybe she wouldn't want it then . . .

Now she was going back; she had failed and was going back. Give up all this which had meant so much—so very much!

She cried a little and berated herself for "bawlin' like a fool kid"

FIREWORKS AND NOISE WILL USHER IN THE 17TH

HUNT FOR MALDEN HUSBAND

Fearing "foul play," Mrs. Morris Wyman of Steeves st., Malden, has asked police here and in Boston to search for her husband, Morris Wyman, 40, who has been missing since yesterday.

Wyman is a metal worker who has been doing mortgage work as a sideline due to ill health. At noon he told his wife he would be a little late as he had to see a woman on mortgage business.

Police learned that Wyman and a woman whom he introduced as Mrs. Smith talked about a mortgage with Mrs. A. L. Philbrook of 1150 Salem st., Malden.

Wyman has not been seen since. The Wymans have been married 19 years and have five children, all under 17.

The Curious Quizzer

West Roxbury Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures

THE QUESTION

Do you think it is right to sacrifice a part of Arnold Arboretum to open the way for a wider road on the Boston Providence route?

HAROLD L. PILLSBURY, Abbott st.—It is an open question. On one side it seems irreverent to mar the beauty of such a wonderfully secluded section, so loved by Bostonians and visitors. On the other hand, when one takes into consideration that by taking a strip of the land automobile traffic can be made safer, not to say much traveled section, I believe that the land should be taken. The loss of the part taken would not affect the dimensions of the Arboretum to any great extent.

MRS. ROSE HOWARD, Center st.—In the interest of the public in general, cut off some of the Arboretum land and make the district safe for street travel. The place is beautiful. But the traffic there is terrible. Thousands of machines pass by the grounds daily. Plenty of accidents caused by the narrowness of the road would be prevented if the street were widened by acquiring some of the land in question. The Arboretum can afford to spare a strip of land without losing its grandeur in the slightest degree.

MRS. ALBERT A. MERRILL, Sherwood st.—The state would not allow the cutting off a whole section of the Arnold Arboretum to widen a street. This place means a lot to the people who take justifiable pride in it as a show place for lovers of nature. I was born in this section and I look out every morning from my bedroom window and see with rapture the loveliness of the Arnold Arboretum. Persons not willing to undergo a few seconds delay when traveling by auto can take another route along Washington st., or along Center st., instead of driving by the rear of the Arboretum. The place is too beautiful to be spoiled. It is a quiet place, not used by petting parties, and if some of the land is taken away now it will be only a matter of time until more will be taken.

ELMER GRANLUND, Centre st.—People come here to the Arboretum in large numbers from all over the country, to enjoy its beauty. Going or coming they add to the procession of auto riders passing through the district over the Boston-Providence route. The confusion caused as a result of the heavy traffic would be the narrowness of the road would be prevented if the land were widened by acquiring a strip of land without losing its grandeur in the slightest degree.

2 MASKED MEN ROB COUPLE

Providence, R. I., June 13 (AP)—Two masked and armed auto bandits held up a young man and woman in an automobile parked in Moses Cut, a lonely stretch of road near the State Prison, tore a $200 diamond ring from the girl's hand, took $3 from her pocket book, and robbed her escort of $15 in an effort to hide the diamond ring the young woman, Bertha Kerlick of Providence, slipped it off and clenched her hand. The bandits threatened to beat her over the head with a revolver but if she did not "hand it over."

Miss Kerlick and her companion, Edward Paolucci, also of Providence, drove to Auburn, where they reported the holdup to the police.

POLICE SLAYER GETS LIFE TERM

Providence, June 13—Nathan L. Brown, convicted slayer of two policemen, today was sentenced to the State prison at Howard for life by Judge Walsh. Brown had asked leniency, but Judge Walsh said he ordinarily did not like to give a life sentence, but in this case he said he had "no compunction as the man had needlessly killed two fine upstanding officers doing their duty."

Brown shot Sergt. William A. Flynn and Patrolman James O'Brien when they went to his home a year ago to arrest him on a liquor charge. The man's sentencing was delayed until today because of an appeal for a new trial, which has just been refused.

Bostwick Brothers to Ride in Country Club Races

SKILLED AMATEURS IN GREAT DEMAND

A. C. BOSTWICK and his younger brother, George Herbert, better known as "Pete," are en route to Brookline on the yacht of W[illegible] [illegible]. Both are accomplished riders, as the best of the great grandstand performers often are, and both are certificated [illegible] National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, and to [illegible] many worthwhile events. Both are really sons of [illegible] sporting enthusiasm, and both are equipped and entitled [illegible] to ride in any amateur event. [illegible] for, not unlike there is a great demand for [illegible] services as there should be.

Sumner Pingree has just been elected a member of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association. He is one of the few young men in a group of 60 that govern steeplechasing and non-professional racing over the entire country. Among his fellow members are Joseph E. Widener, Hiram Payne Whitney, Clarence H. Mackay, Walter M. Jeffords, J. E. Davis, Howard W. Maxwell, George D. Widener, H. W. Sage, Harry S. Bull, A. Henry Huggiason, Henry G. Vaughan, John R. Macombs, Augustus F. Goodwin, Bayard Warren, John Hay Whitney, Samuel D. Riddle, Bayard Tuckerman, J. R. Ambrose Clark, Howard Mortimer, Richard Whitney, and many more of the active figures of racing's worth while workers.

VICTOR EMANUEL, who races under the nom de course of the Derwood Stable, has sent the two best of both his cross-country and flat performers to seek some of the laurels at Clyde Park. Sun Forward who was first to the finish in eleven out last year is to be one of the starters in the Millwood, the inaugural event of the opening day at Brookline. This colt races in the colors of Mrs. Emanuel, red white spots, white sleeves and cap, a newcomer bidding for turf glory.

A. Ludlow Kramer, well known in financial circles in New York, after several years of inactivity in racing, will make his return to a sport of which he is a keen student during the Newton Hunt Club's cream which will carry his silks has been made ready by John Whalen, who formerly handled the stable of the late August Belmont. James Healy will look after the horse while here.

SOLICITOR, who will be a bidder for the more important chases is owned by Harold Fosh who for many years has been influential in racing in England, France and Australia. Fowler has ridden several times in England's cross-country classic, the Liverpool Grand National, of course on horses from his own stable. Snaffle, another in England the Chandler Handicap, Chase at Warwick and the Bar racks Handicap Chase at Windsor.

Regan McKinney who has brought on from the West several of his best hunters for the Challenge Cup and the National Hunt Cup, will be up on them in all events restricted to gentlemen riders. His father, the late Price McKinney, was internationally known as an owner and breeder, and was one of the real friends of racing ever foremost in any movement for the betterment of racing.

THE rule of racing that calls for "starters in all the events to be in paddock 20 minutes before post time after the gate in which they are to run," will be rigidly enforced, and horses not so reported will be ordered out by the stewards. The purpose of this is to avoid confusion and delay in the general effort to have the details of the meeting carried on for the best interests of both the public and the horsemen.

George Duller, England's premier steeplechase jockey, will be on hand to ride the Jamaica of Derwood Stable. All will enjoy the opportunity to see him in the saddle for he is a thorough horseman trained in a school that [illegible] respect for [illegible] and [illegible] fearless, as well as [illegible] to New London for the [illegible] of Club. American riders [illegible] will be Rubigny with which he recently won the Ancient Steeplechase Handicap at Woodbine, the Ya[illegible] on the Thames course, beautiful course of the Ontario Jockey Club at Toronto.

EDIFY, Sumner Pingree's daughter of Haldeman from Edith E. who won at Belmont Park on Monday with A. Kelly, carrying the well known "silver and black" of the Flying Horse Farm, has been nominated for the Chamblet Memorial and the Norfolk Hunt Steeplechase to be run on Saturday. Her runaway victory at Belmont Park has brought a problem for the students of form. She ran and won like a mare far above the ordinary, and it should bring her to the post in the Chamblet, for here she will meet a fair class field, where an answer to the question can be found. Kelly, who will ride her, is a Canadian and Monday's race was his first for the Pingree Stable.

In the early days of racing at the Country Club, Robert C. Hooper was constantly giving his time and money to those in charge. He raced for many years a powerful string of jumpers, winning the Challenge Cup as far back as 1900 with Orchidee, using as the stable name Mr Chamblet. During these successful years Silas Veitch was the stable jockey and classed among the top notchers of those days. Both owner and rider have passed on, but memories of those bak'en days will be revived on Saturday when the first representative of the jumpers from the Cleveland Farms Stable passes the stand on the way to the post. On the track will be Sidney Veitch, a son of Silas.

Dutton Retains Senior Golf Title

George C. Dutton of Woollard and Boldt won the New England Senior Golf Association title. He won over his home course showing a nine and six and 51 for a new low 36-hole total with no less than an eleven shot margin A. B. Jenks of Manchester, N. H. was the runner up with scores of 53 and 84 for the total of 137.

Elevated Bus Service to Clyde Park Race Meet

The Boston Elevated will run buses every 10 minutes from Roxbury and Lee sts. to Clyde Park for the races next Monday, starting at noon, and continuing until 7 p. m. The automobile jam will be such that many will prefer to travel by street car, although parking space will be available at adjacent streets and lots. The roads near the Country Club recently have been put in excellent condition by the town of Brookline.

KEENAN HOPES FOR WIN OVER CHAPMAN

Now that Frankie Keenan the Revere pace follower has found himself and is riding so well, bike fans are expecting him to be right up front in the 25-mile race at the Revere track Saturday night. Last week Keenan just could not be beaten and if he rides the same kind of a race Saturday he will lead Chappie, his bitterest rival, a merry chase.

To win Saturday night, Keenan must not only beat George Chapman, but also Francesco Zucchetti, Charlie Jaeger and Victor Raush, the latter a newcomer from Germany, who will be making his first appearance at the beach oval.

Chapman is still riding like a champion. Last week he was at Keenan's heels for most of the race and was the only one to give the Revere boy any opposition at all. Zucchetti is figured to make the going fast, for he is one of the favorites for the American title this year and since the start of the season he has been defeating all comers, even the champion, Franco Georgetti.

Raush is a "find" of Clarence Carman, the pace setter and a former champion. Last winter, in Germany, Carmen saw Raush in sprint races and was so impressed with the youngster that he immediately asked him to come to this country. Raush arrived here only a few weeks ago and has been riding so well that Carman says he will not be surprised if the prodigy wins the title.

Jaeger, a Newark boy, suffered a double fracture of his leg last season, but the injury healed so well that Jaeger is going as fast as ever. He was a sensation on European tracks last winter.

Nat Butler will also stage either a special tandem or pursuit race. There will be other races for amateurs and pros.

WOMAN EXPERT LAUDS LURE OF HORSE RACING

By MRS. SUMNER PINGREE
Joint Owner of Flying Horse Farm

Since the establishment of racing at the Country Club three years ago, it has been surprising to see how much local interest has been awakened in the "Sport of Kings."

Many have recently put horses in training, and have registered their colors with the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, thereby becoming real "owners," and it is hoped that the brilliant alike of these new Massachusetts enthusiasts will be seen steadily increasing in number as victories for them multiply.

Some of these newcomers to the racing world have recognized in their pet hunters turns of exceptional speed, ability to take their fences in clever fashion, or other signs which have stirred in them a desire to have a steeplechase winner, while others have found a likely looking two-year-old which they wish to develop to run on the flat.

MANY ARE RIDERS

Old men, young men, women and girls are showing the keenest interest, and many gallop and school their own mounts. As a healthy pastime it is unexcelled. It keeps one alert, out in the open, and "up with the birds," whether one rides trains, or merely follows the process of developing racing prospect from the side lines.

It is the "one-horse owner" who perhaps gets the biggest "kick" out of running his entries, for he has in all probability, picked out his horse himself, and with faith in its ability, personally supervised every stage of its training from the first gallop. He has "clocked" its breezes," to determine how much speed the animal possesses, watched the early morning schools," when his horse is put over the jumps, and finally stood in the saddling paddock while the finished product walks proudly around, sleek and shining, with the "Look of Eagles" again to go.

UNIVERSAL INTEREST

One of the chief fascinations of racing is the feeling that one's horse has a chance, and even though it may seem but a faint hope, an owner nearly always feels that his horse will be the gallant one. If a horse meets with interference on the flat, or comes a cropper over a jump, it is part of the game, and the old saying "if at first you don't succeed, try, try again" does not prove more pungent of anything, than of the spirit of a racing owner.

Now on all sides, one hears talk of this or that locally owned horse. The grocer wishes to know how his horse is coming along. The mail-carrier asks for a tip. The shopkeeper has been following a horse which made its debut last year, and the office clerk hopes that he will be able to take his family to the Country Club this spring for the unusually good racing, both flat and steeplechasing that will take place there on June 15 and on the holidays, June 17, also at the beautiful Macomber estate [illegible] Framingham Center, on June 19.

Yankees Down to 25 Player Limit

New York, June 13—The Yankees reached the 25-men limit today, when Outfielder Van Gilder, replacing Floyd Van Pelt, 21-year-old right hander, upon the voluntarily retired list. Van Gilder won 19 games for Montgomery in the Southeastern League last year, but an arm injury incapacitated him this season.

Three Twi Battles on Card Tonight

By DICK McSWEENEY

TWI LEAGUE fans are in for an active evening with six out of the eight teams in the circuit slated for diamond warfare. There are three games on tonight's program, Salem visiting South Boston, Roslindale journeying to Reading, and Revere invading Malden.

South Boston was waging a great fight to grab the league lead last week but a 15-1 hammering was administered by Roslindale on Tuesday. Maybe the South Boston team can resume its winning habits at the expense of the Witch City outfit. Fans who attend the game at C. J. Lee Park, South Boston, tonight will have an opportunity to see for themselves.

Salem sent Lou Harrington on the mound while the home boys will line up with Whiting in the box.

Roslindale should have its troubles in downing the Reading club at Reading. The latter outfit has just emerged from the cellar and is seeking air so well that it is liable to climb a notch or two higher.

ROSLINDALE showed plenty of batting punch in that recent melee with South Boston. Any club that can hammer out a win over South Boston is headed for the high spots. Lou Strecker or Billy Rose is to chuck them for Roslindale.

Colucci will be sent in against the visiting club and Reading fans predict that he will send the conquerors of South Boston down in one-two-three fashion.

Revere and Malden will mingle at the latter's ballwick tonight in a game that may well be won by either team. Both Revere and Malden have to struggle against the opposition of amateur and semi-pro teams which attract large followings in both of these cities, much to the detriment of Twi League "gates."

Father-Daughter Golf Won By Riches

Miss Ruth Rich and Chet Rich of Wellesley easily were the class of the field as victors in the annual father-and-daughter tournament. Their gross of 81 was the best by eight strokes. Miss Virginia Kenworthy and Harry Kenworthy of Metacomet tied for second with Miss Martha Brewer and Charley Brewer of the home club with 89s.

Chosen Captain

Williamstown, June 13—George A. Ashby of Albany, N. Y., has been elected captain of the Williams lacrosse team for next year.

Wrestling Wrangle Will Not Down; Sonny Storm Center

LOCAL FANS EXPRESS VARIOUS VIEWS

today continued to be the storm center in the wrestling world.

Sport fans are divided as to whether the former Dartmouth football hero is picking on a few of setups so as to protect his title.

Billy Sandow, Lewis' manager, continues to lead the nation-wide drive on Sonnenberg. Backed by a fund of $25,000, Sandow plans to carry the fight against the champion into Boston.

Sonnenberg was expected to arrive here today from Canada, where he has been on a vacation.

Edward C. Foster, chairman of the Rhode Island Athletic Commission and secretary of the National Boxing Association, has come to the defense of Sonnenberg.

"I have seen Sonnenberg in all of his matches in New England," said Foster. "I probably know more about the mat game than the average person. I do not believe there was anything off color in any of Gus' New England bouts.

"Sonnenberg has done a great deal to elevate sport and has always given his best when I have seen him in action.

Here is what sport leaders and fans think of the Sonnenberg situation.

ATTY. PATRICK F. MORAN, East Boston, former member House of Representatives—I have always considered Gus Sonnenberg a rag and bone of athlete, and yellow who is good enough to land a berth on an All-American team is not lacking in courage. I thought Sonnenberg showed plenty of ability in his Boston matches against Lewis, Mikelewicz and Pleshus. I do not approve of Sonnenberg's barnstorming trips. He should stop going after the easy money in the small cities and towns and take on legitimate challengers in the big cities. It would be better for him to remain idle than to keep hop-scotching around the country with setups as opponents.

TOMMY PARLE, Arena A. C.—I do not believe Sonnenberg requires any aid from anybody to win his mat bouts. He can defeat any of the opposition regardless of what names they may parade under. I have seen Gus in all of his Boston matches. His opponents have had standing, have been known to the fans and none of them have been able to defeat him. Gus is being attacked for posters put out by inexperienced promoters in small towns. I believe the best way for Sonnenberg to stop the shriekers would be by agreeing to take on one of the outstanding challengers in a finish bout with the title at stake.

DICK RUSSELL, Lynn—I don't know a great deal about the wrestling game, but on general principle I believe the champion should be forced to enter a ring with a stand out challenger. In the boxing game, a champion would not be allowed to pick his opponents. Merely because Sonnenberg happens to be a college graduate he should not be granted special privileges. Let him take on first class men or quit the game.

JOHNNY BUCKLEY—Gus Sonnenberg has certainly added plenty of fire to the wrestling game. I have never favored barnstorming tours for boxers or wrestlers as both figures it is getting short changed. It would be better for the champion to restrict his efforts to matches in the big cities. I would like to see Gus take on Lewis or Stranko.

LOUIS PENNEY, Cycle A. C.—I believe the athletic commissions have acted wisely in decreeing that Sonnenberg must meet Lewis, Steinke, Londos or some other high class challenger. Gus has had his share of easy matches. Of course I suppose he merely wishes to make hay while the sun shines, as the old adage goes. In the highly commercialized age of sport, the average star athlete wants to pick up all the easy money in sight before risking a meeting with a headliner.

ATTY. WILLIAM J. DONAHOE, Brighton—I am always at the ringside when Sonnenberg wrestles in Boston. He has always produced action. He is a high type of athlete and I don't think he is afraid of any grappler in the world. Sonnenberg proved his courage when playing football at Dartmouth. I believe Gus could silence his critics by agreeing to meet one of the outstanding challengers.

Mitchell Ruled Out for Pulling Punches

Providence, June 13—Roy Mitchell of Halifax was declared loser of the bout with Lou Bogash of Bridgeport at the end of the first round for pulling his punches. Ernie Mandell of this city defeated Johnny Fau of Cleveland in the 10-round final.

HURTS HAND IN TRAINING

Sammy Fuller (above) and Jake Zeramby won't settle the question of ring supremacy until next Thursday night. The bout, originally billed by the Arena Club for Fenway Park for tonight, has been put back a week on account of a strained ligament suffered by Fuller in his right hand during the closing session of his training.

DAWSON WINS; CRANE LOSES IN BRITISH GOLF

Sunningdale, Eng., June 13 (AP)—James Dawson, Chicago golf star, came out last 16 of the British amateur golf championship tournament today with a smashing victory over Edward Kyle, young Scottish mining engineer whom Scottish enthusiasts believed was the best side bet for the title.

The American player won six of the last seven holes, with a score of two under fours. He played it steadily as a veteran, despite the gale of wind sweeping across the links. The score was four and four.

While Dawson was running through with his outstanding victory, Joshua Crane, veteran of Boston amateur, was being eliminated by his fellow-countryman, Bobby Smith, three and two. Baugh meets Cyril Tolley in the afternoon round.

Andrew McNair, Glasgow youth, provided the biggest sensation of the championship today, eliminating the titleholder, Phil Perkins, by one hole.

Bunioneers Run 76 Miles Today

Tarumba, Cal., June 13 (AP)—With less than 20 minutes separating the two leaders in the Pole cross-country race and the finish at Los Angeles only a matter of a few days, the lap of 76 miles to San Diego, Cal., today was viewed as one of the most important for the leg-weary road plodders.

Pete Gavuzzi, England, had a lead of only 19 minutes 56 seconds over Johnny Salo, Passaic, N. J., at the start of the long hike. Salo materially reduced the Italian's advantage yesterday by winning the 58-mile run from Calexico, Cal., in 9 hours 8 minutes 5 seconds. Gavuzzi finished third. Guido Timek of Italy, third in elapsed time, was second.

RISKO SURE HE WILL DEFEAT MALONEY

Feeling certain that he will punch his way to victory over Jimmy Maloney at the launching of the open air boxing season at Braves Field, next Monday night, Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight today can see another opportunity of stepping into the ring with Max Schmeling, the German champion. The Cleveland backboy feels confident that he will be selected as the alternate principal for the big Milk Fund show in New York, where Schmeling faces Paulino on June 27 at the Yankee Stadium.

Maloney, for that matter also jumped at the opportunity of acting as alternate for this show following a conference between Eddie Mack of Boston and William C. Carey of New York, where it was decided to hold the winner of Monday's bout in readiness to step into the ring in New York should either Paulino or Schmeling suffer injuries which would force them out of the bout.

Both Risko and Maloney waded into their training work with a new spirit today for each is anxious to come out of Monday night's bout the winner in order to stand in line to rush to New York if needed. Yet all their efforts primarily are directed in preparing for Monday's stiff argument for this heavyweight match, which will pay off the bill of the open air season looms up as one of the most important fistic affairs ever clinched for this city.

If Monday night's bout does not end in a knockout, each of the principals will be disappointed for each is planning to get over a dream punch early in the bout.

Lou Scozza of Buffalo will clash with Arthur Flynn of Lawrence in the 10-round semi-final. Scozza replaces Joe Zelinsky who suffered an injured hand. Scozza and Flynn have met twice before with each of them carrying off one decision.

MR. BOSTON BY JACK CONWAY

MR. BOSTON found Johnny Risko and Tommy McFarland parked in the Sporting Department.

"We wanted to say hello," piped Risko.

"How do you feel about your fight with Jim Maloney next Monday night?" queried Mr. Boston.

"I'll knock him out," replied Risko. "I wasn't in the best of condition when I last met Jim. But when I step into the ring on Monday night I'll be in as good condition as I was the night I licked Otto Von Porat.

"I'll crowd Maloney from the gong. I'll keep shooting all kinds of punches at him. And mark my words I'll stop him.

"Eddie Mack can then trot out Benzagos for me. I never saw the Italian fight, but they tell me he is a big, tough fellow."

"You don't worry about the tough ones," said Mr. Boston laughingly. "You once fought Godfrey."

"That baby is plenty tough enough," replied Risko. "He's so big it's hard to do anything with him. When you punch him, your blow has as much effect as if delivered against the side of a mountain."

MR. BOSTON asked Risko for his opinion of the probable outcome of the Paulino-Schmeling bout which will be staged in New York two weeks from tonight.

"I like Paulino to win," said Risko. "I have fought both men. I won a decision over Paulino, while Schmeling knocked me out. Yet I pick the Basque.

"Paulino is all head and elbows. He is as tough a fellow as ever entered a ring. The 15-round distance will find him at his best. Max will find Paulino hard to hit, while the woodchopper is quite a thumper himself.

"Schmeling is an easy target. I had him outscored up to the time I got careless and was nailed. I made the mistake of under rating Schmeling."

ASKED for an opinion as to how Jack Sharkey would fare with either Schmeling or Paulino, Risko said the Boston contender would lick either man.

"Sharkey is too fast and knows too much about the fine points of the boxing game for either Paulino or Schmeling," chirped Risko. "Paulino would give Sharkey the most trouble, as he is more difficult to hit, but Jack would prove too clever for him. It will take a great fighter to lick Sharkey."

TOMMY McFARLAND displayed a telegram conveying the information that Danny Dunn, Risko's manager, would arrive in town Saturday.

"The telegram says Dunn has Risko booked for a bout in Detroit the latter part of this month," said Tommy. "Johnny's opponent has not been selected yet."

"I DON'T care who Dunn puts me in with," said Risko. "A fighter must take on all-comers. Unless a man likes the game, he should get into another racket. I have engaged in 80 to 90 bouts and have never picked my opponents."

"As you're only 26 years old, you're good for four or five more years in the game," said Mr. Boston.

"Two years more will be enough for me," asserted Risko. "By that time I shall have all the money I shall ever need. I have earned $250,000 in the boxing game and have seized most of it."

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Judging from the letters received, there are a great many golfers who believe with the writer that the four and under men should be rated on the merits of each season's play and not carried over because they had a good year back in the dark ages.

Jack Gray, the professional at Wollaston, is so busy teaching that he has played little golf this season. In the past, Jack neglected his lessons in order to play, but a trip to Scotland evidently showed him the error of his ways.

Thorney Lea is planning to handle the largest crowd that ever attended an open in Brockton. There are enough prizes to warrant such preparations and also there is some danger that the course record of 71, which was set up by C. Searis Reed last year, will go by the boards.

The Oyster Harbor week end tournaments are becoming more and more popular, and within a couple of weeks, it will be the busiest course on the Cape.

President Jim Kimball and Frank Coleman are scheduled to play a match next Sunday, which will decide for all time the Orchard championship of the South Shore Country Club.

The season at the Scituate Country Club has opened with a rush, and Jack Leary, the club professional, is out teaching in the hot sun from early morning until dark.

The New England Professional Golfers' Association tournament will be held at the Kernwood Country Club, one of the finest golf layouts in this country.

The gate should be closed to those mug hunters who shoot in the 70s and try to convince everybody that they are entitled to a handicap in the double figures.

Miss Ruth Rich and her father, Chet Rich of Wellesley, won the annual Father and Daughter tournament yesterday at the Weston Golf Club with an 81. Forty were 25 pairs in the field, a remarkable turnout.

Speaking of large fields, there were 110 starters at Albemarle. And, by the way, it will be advisable to telephone Willie Duffy before starting times today for according to Fred Corcoran there will be considerably more battling over the Albemarle lay out today than worked out during the opening session.

Evidently there is some importance attached to the Newspapermen's Golf Association championship for the largest field in the history of the organization played in the qualifying round at Wollaston yesterday.

"Ole Doc" Kendall was on hand to extend the palm of welcome to the newspaper friends. "Doc's" welcome is very popular with the scribes.

John Merwin played in his first open tournament of the season yesterday at Albemarle and in about six holes he was red hot. He had a 12 footer for an eagle on the first hole, a two-yarder for a deuce at the fourth, 3rd green with the wind trailing, it is a wonderful smash to drive the second green at Albemarle.

"He had no idea he was so accurate in his hitting or so fast with his counters," said Carpenter.

Dan Howley and His Browns Assault Red Sox Today

GASTON IN BOX FOR NATIVES

By NICK FLATLEY

DAN HOWLEY'S St. Louis Browns and the town of Weymouth are at Fenway Park this afternoon. The Browns start a four-day assault on the Red Sox and the natives will have to do a lot of fighting to emerge with any honors from the battling.

For Weymouth, Daniel has a good ball club. He is in third place in the American League scramble and has the young men believing that they will soon pass the Yankees. The dope does not rate the Browns as good a club as the Yanks by several million miles, but the old spirit often rides rough shod over the figures.

Howley is an inspirational young man, who has worked wonders with a none or less fluttery ball club. He has taken over two or three athletes, supposedly hard to manage and made stars of them. He has picked up a few castoff pitchers and turned them into mound heroes.

Daniel is one of the outstanding figures in the American League this year, and seems destined to become one of the great pilots. He has the necessary spark, and love of the game.

MILTON GASTON, who has won three games in a row—quite a record with a last place ball club—will try to add another to his string today. Milton toiled for years with the St. Louis club, so naturally likes to beat his former pals.

Gaston, lately, has been the steadiest of the Sox pitchers. He has won his games without any hard breaks, through good, consistent chucking. He was a bit slow to get started, and when he did come into form the boys kicked away a couple for him. But since he crashed into the win column he has been invincible.

Alvin Crowder, who was a baseball sensation a year ago, will start for Mr. Howley. Alvin hasn't been doing so well this year, but has turned in some good games, nonetheless. The reigning Sox experience now, and is a tough bird for any club to beat.

THE RED SOX haven't completed any trades yet, but Bob Quinn hasn't given up hope. He has two more days still in which to collect big league ball players. Bob has made offers to every club in the league. But he hasn't done any business.

He could get a lot of talent, if he would let Ed Morris or Charlie Ruffing go. But he can't see his way clear to that. The hostile offers haven't even tempted him.

The Tigers and the Yankees are both desperate for pitchers and have made pretty good offers. But Quinn will not let go until he thinks he can get a real run for his money. He wants to strengthen his ball club.

A Tiger deal has not been called off entirely, and something may turn up before Saturday. The Yanks have made an enticing offer for Morris but that was turned down. Big Ed looks like one hired who would be able to help a building club materially, for several years to come.

THE SOX must let a couple of young men on before Saturday passes in history. Chances are that Bill Carrigan will send Ashby, the tall catcher, out for experience. He can also drop a few sub pitchers, as the curtailing practice, except during Ruths, haven't shown a thin all year.

Big Ashby isn't ready yet by a long shot, but he has a lot of raw native ability. He has a world of rough edges to be sure. Jeff Cartwell and Durham, [illegible] could profit by seeing some wild, good minor club.

THE BROWNS linger around through the Sunday games at Braves Field. Then the irrepressible back for the Easter April Day double header, which, incidentally will be played at the Fenway. The Sox holiday games are booked for Braves field, but that scheme was announced when it looked like a big Boston year.

The ill success of the local clubs has removed the need for large seating capacities, so the Sox will stay at home. The shift causes a lot of bother and some expense, but both can be eliminated, and will be until such time as Fenway Fortune takes a decided turn for the better.

Sets New Record

Montclair, N. J., June 13 Eddie Held New York, scored 69 for a new course record for the Montclair Golf Club in the qualifying round of the 36-hole test for pairs in the metropolitan amateur golf championship.

FATHERS BATTLE DAUGHTERS

Portland Pitching Ace Meets His First Defeat of the Season

By CHARLES HOFFMANN

DUKE SEDGWICK, the Portland pitching ace, who had won eight straight games without defeat, was handed his first setback at the hands of the Lynn club and as a result the Portland ace is now in last place, Lewiston being defeated by Tom Dennouth's last place Lowell team. Both the Lynn and Portland teams hit the ball hard, but Lynn made theirs at the more opportune time. Portland having 11 men left on the sacks.

Lewiston and Lowell engaged in a batting fest with Lowell emerging a victor by the score of 9 to 8. Jesse Burkett used his star hurler, Diehl, trying to stem the tide but to no avail.

This ended Lewiston's winning streak of four games, and shoved the Twins into second place.

Manchester had quite a day at the expense of the Brockton club defeating the Shoe City team 5 to the score of 22 to 1.

As a result of this victory they slipped into third place, Portland being defeated by 1 run.

WIN CLARK is doing quite a job with the Manchester club this year. When he started he was on the mound but he can now be found in left field most every day, but right now he has one of the most potent batting clubs in the league and stood he up there at the end of the season.

Four games are on tap today. Lynn plays at Portland, as we and Lowell will try to take another fall out of the Lewiston club.

Haverhill at Brockton and Manchester at New Bedford is the other two contests scheduled.

New England League Notes

Big Jack McCarthy, formerly with Portland and Manchester last year, has been signed up by Al Ryan of Brockton and has bolstered up the Brockton team.

Chuck Wolfe of Lewiston turned in a victory on his wedding day. Let us hope that he will be happy in his new venture.

Eddie Bogart went on a hitting spree in the game with Lewiston, batting out four hits. One of these went for a homer which sailed over the right field fence in Lewiston the second time it has been done this season.

Bowman, Manchester clean up man, also had a field day at the expense of the Brockton pitchers batting out three hits, a home run, double and two singles were his contributions.

Dorman and Slavback, two of Bowmans playmates, also made four hits apiece. Dorman getting four singles, while Slavback poked out three singles and a double.

Manchester got 25 hits for a total of 22 runs which will probably be a record for this year in the league. Brockton, the loser made 10 hits but could only garner four runs.

Manager Ryan protested the game claiming that Joe Bradshaw, the Manchester pitcher, was applying liquid to the ball.

NEKOLA, H. C. MOUND ACE, JOINS YANKS

Frank Nekola, star pitcher of Holy Cross College, has been suspended for entering into an agreement with the New York Yankees according to Cleo O'Donnell, manager of athletics.

I wired Judge Landis upon receiving a notice that Nekola has signed with the Yankees and a reply from his secretary stated that Nekola had agreed to join the Yanks on June 22," Mr. O'Donnell announced.

"There has been altogether too much controversy making the rounds regarding Nekola and major league clubs. I realize that many college ball players have agreements with professional clubs, but we do not sanction this practice at Holy Cross and Nekola is positively out of athletics for all time at Holy Cross.

A week or so ago the report was circulated that Nekola had signed with the Chicago White Sox and the pitcher was suspended. On this occasion, however, Nekola was saved by a telegram from Judge Landis who stated that the athlete had not signed with any major league club.

Nekola left Worcester yesterday and it is stated by a reliable authority that he is in New York. Although the rumor has been current all season that Nekola would not return to Holy Cross next year, the student body believed that he would refrain from any agreement with a professional ball club, and he was being asked upon to win a second victory over Boston College at Braves Field next Saturday.

B. C. TO ENGAGE TUFTS AT OVAL

The Eagles of B. C. and the Jumbos of Tufts will play baseball for the first time since 1926 at the Oval tomorrow afternoon. Boston College, with the resumption of rivalries between the city schools, takes an important place on the Tufts' schedule for to-morrow will be class day at Medford.

The Eagles should provide plenty of thrills. Boston College is considered classier than Tufts but the Eagles will have to prove this. In 1926 the Jumbos defeated seven in two games with B. C. and Ken Nash has produced one of his best teams this spring.

More than that it will be the final game before the objectives for both outfits. Boston College meets its arch-enemy, Holy Cross, at Braves Field on Saturday. Tufts plays host to Harvard at the Oval on the same afternoon.

As the opponents tomorrow will use their second string nines, although the best lineups of both clubs will be on the field with the exception of the pitchers. Perry Herman or John Dixon will fling them for B. C. Storey is likely to be Ken Nash's choice.

Thus Coach Huch Duffy will be able to save Hugh McNulty and Jim O'Connor, his best pair of hurlers, for the Purple and Nash will have his ace, Lew Adams, ready for the annual Cranson invasion.

This fact, and also that B. C. will be pampered this time for Saturday baseball of the Crusaders, is boosting the B. C. stock, although 2 to 1 odds are likely to prevail for Saturday's meeting.

TENNIS STARTS SATURDAY

Play in the 36th annual lawn tennis tournament for the men's singles championship of Massachusetts will start Saturday at 2:30 o'clock on the grass courts of the Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill, with an entry list which will run 75 to 100.

Some of the leading entries are E. Morrison Neals, 21 percent State champion; Henry T. Tuity of Harvard and Santa Barbara, Malcolm Hoff of Harvard and Wahan, Frank Lure of Yale and G. Holmes Perkins, former Harvard player and present doubles champion with Henry Tuth.

LE MOND RUNS IN TWI MEET

New York, June 13 Lee Le Mond, Boston A. A. star, has accepted an invitation to compete at the twilight track meet at the Yankee Stadium Monday night.

Le mond, formerly at his best at distances from ten miles up, has developed into a fine miler and it is at the mile that he will compete next Monday. His principal opposition probably will come from Joe Hickey of New York University, intercollegiate indoor and outdoor champion.

Le mond ran the mile in 4:14 2-5 in the Penn relays at Philadelphia, his sparring was beautiful. He led for the jaw, landing a right swing that nearly took Jeffords off his feet. From that time to the end of the round he repeatedly landed his left on Jeffords's jaw, the latter saving himself from a knockout blow by frequently clinching. At the end of the round Jeffords was being beaten to the ropes without landing a blow that counted.

The beginning of the third round found Jeffords very groggy. O'Brien made a rush and landed a terrific punch on the side of his opponent's jaw. Jeffords went down and rolled over on his face, showing that he was suffering terrible agony.

He staggered to his feet as the referee called time, and to save himself he clinched with O'Brien. A series of wrestle ensued and Jeffords, with his opponent O'Brien and threw him heavily to the floor. Referee Fred Sweigart promptly declared O'Brien the winner of the bout on a foul. A great uproar followed. The audience demanded that the fight be allowed to proceed to a finish.

O'Brien, who had gotte to his corner, expressed willingness to go ahead and the referee withdrew his decision. Nearly a minute had been lost in the struggle and this gave Jeffords a little respite, but when the referee said go O'Brien was on his man like a tiger and with a terrific right to the body sent Jeffords to the floor for a count.

EVERS AT LOSS HOW TO HALT DEFEAT

St. Louis, June 13—With his pitchers and batters moving along at an erratic clip, Acting Manager Johnny Evers does not know which way to turn in trying to check the slump of the Braves. After a remarkable spurt at the start of the season when eight of the first 10 games were won, the Braves lost 27 out of the last 38 contests and today are tied for seventh place with Brooklyn.

The series with the Cardinals is the last of the initial invasion of the West. The opening game was postponed but this game will be played tomorrow with the original schedule calling for an open date.

Bob Smith who has hurled one of the two victories on this journey is expected to oppose the Cardinals this afternoon. He has Southpaw Bill Sherdel for his opponent.

Evers' hurling staff has collapsed during the past three weeks. On top of the week preceding, the pillars have not been driving with their safe hits, thus the Braves have been dropping many close games.

The Braves find the Cardinals in the thick of a winning streak, four straight victories having been gained over the fading Phillies. Previously the second placers dropped three in a row to the Giants.

OPEN PAIRINGS ANNOUNCED

New York, June 13 (INS)—Robby Jones will play the first two rounds of the national open golf championship in Winged Foot late this month in company with Emmet French; Walter Hagen, perennial British open champion, will have Louis Cheliza as a partner; George Von Elm will play with John Bernah, Newton Centre, Mass.; Horton Smith and Leon Stuttle, Kansas City; Bill Mehlhorn with Roland Hancock, who almost won the last championship; Leo Diegel with Emmet Spiers, the Tennessee amateur, and Johnny Farrell, the present champion, with Willie Kidd, Minneapolis.

This was made known today when the United States Golf Association released the official pairings for the first two rounds of the title play. Hagen will begin play the first day at 8:35 o'clock, Gene Sarazen being first off the tee five minutes sooner. Von Elm will go at 12:45, Horton Smith 10 minutes later; Mehlhorn at 1:15; Diegel at 1:20, Farrell at 1:40 and Kidd at 1:50.

On the second day, the field will reverse itself, except that neither Hagen nor Sarazen will be asked to go off among the late starters for fear that they may hurt their chances by finishing in twilight.

Tad Tells How Jack O'Brien Got Jump on Jim Jeffords

For many years "Tad," T. A. Dorgan, one of the greatest cartoonists and sporting authorities that ever lived, covered the "fistic" beat for the Hearst papers. Shortly before his death Tad wrote and illustrated a series of stories describing in his inimitable style those ring battles which he thrilled and scrupulously new fans stamped indelibly in his mind. These reminiscences deal not with fights in which titles were at stake, but with thrilling affairs staged in private and at the smaller clubs. This story is one of the series.

By TAD

Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien added the scalp of Jim Jeffords to his belt in three rounds of fast fighting in Baltimore on the night of October 21, 1904. It was a clean knockout, with a terrific right-hand body punch that caught Jeffords in the solar plexus and made him writhe in pain on the floor while the referee counted him out. O'Brien came forward and helped to carry the beaten man to his corner.

The fight was at catch weights, O'Brien weighing 158 pounds and Jeffords about 190. The bout was scheduled for 15 rounds, and the men had previously fought a 10-round draw.

The battle was all O'Brien's from the start. He was as quick as chain lightning. Only once, and that in the second round, did Jeffords make a showing. He made a rush that sent O'Brien to the ropes and landed on the Philadelphian's body and head. O'Brien did some good blocking, quickly recovered and, with a terrific right-hand body punch to the solar plexus, sent Jeffords down for the count. Jeffords hardly got up when another punch landed exactly in the same place and he took the full count again. When he got up O'Brien made a rush and landed another body punch that stopped his man but failed to send him down. The gong saved Jeffords.

O'Brien forced the fighting and

BRUSH DENIES SALE OF OIL HOLDINGS

By FRANK H MELOON
Financial Editor

Matthew C. Brush, former head of the Boston Elevated and still an official of that road, about legislatively organization, is naturally in the limelight as head of one of the largest American investment

M. C. Brush Allen Treadwa

trusts and director of many organizations. His friends in Cuba has been providing different varieties of fireworks in Wall Street, with many rumors circulated. Mr. Brush, who is a director, does the most important by denying he has sold his holdings, and adding that he and his friends still have a "very substantial interest."

Textile issues at the Boston stock auctions sold lower, probably reflecting discouragement over the reported plan for 7½ per cent production curtailment. Curtailment to avoid over-production, as instituted by the red metal producers, may be construed as a bearish measure, but it is certainly less bearish in its ultimate effect than allowing over-production to become a reality.

Notice Congressman Allen Treadway of Massachusetts declares: "The duty on hides is not sufficiently high to be a benefit to the purchasers of hides to make into leather or from leather into shoes. An advance in shoe prices before the year is talked of in some quarters, and the consensus of opinion among leaders of the shoe industry is that the outlook for the rest of the year is good.

Manager P. A. Eaton of the Washburn Crosby Co. calls me to his directory of General Mills, Inc., the recent organization of Washburn Crosby Co., the Sperry Flour Co., the Royal Milling Co., the Kell group of mills, and other interior milling concerns, have declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the preferred stock of General Mills, Inc., payable July 1, 1929, to stockholders of record at close of business June 11, 1929.

Research laboratories maintained by our leading industrials continue to figure in the important news of the day. Not at U. S. Industrial Alcohol Co., which, through its subsidiary, U. S. Industrial Chemical Co., has perfected a process for making cellulose acetate which is expected to be passed on the market shortly. This process is understood to be the lowest cost method in existence and is important in its application to the automobile industry as well as the manufacture of non-inflammable moving picture film.

For the first six months of 1929 earnings may reach $1,750,000 or more, or $5.50 to $5.75 a share on the 320,000 common shares. In the first half of 1928 net was $1,138,101, equal, after preferred dividends, to $3.82 a share on the 240,000 common shares. Due to the seasonal nature of the alcohol business it may be assumed that earnings of $5.50 to $5.75 on the common for the first half would indicate at least $15 a share for the full year.

U. S. Industrial Alcohol has long been the subject of interesting unconfirmed rumors over the possibility that it had control of a method of producing fuel alcohol at a cost under that of gasoline. The opening up interesting possibilities.

The "dry" United States has discovered how readily alcohol can be made from nearly everything that grows, but it has only scratched the edge of what is likely to come in commercial exploitation. In this new field alcohol is inseparably wrant and friend of man.

A company more than 100 years old and still going strong is in the town where the Pilgrim fathers landed. This is the Plymouth Cordage Co. and has issued its first semi-annual report showing for the six months ended March 31 1929 net after depreciation, taxes and adjustment of inventories to cost or market of $1,026,891.

Comparison with previous six months' period is impossible, since interest reports have not been issued, but the marked gain in profits is shown by the fact that in the year ended June 30, 1928 before change in date of termination of the fiscal year) net profit after inventory adjustments was $257,977. Profits indicated by balance sheet comparison were $650,643 in the 1927 year, $1,040,440 in 1926 and $1,438,019 in 1925.

MERGER OF BIG UTILITIES IS IN PROSPECT

Wall Street bears that negotiations for a merger of large public utility companies in upper New York state, with total assets of about $500,000,000 were virtually completed at offices of J. P Morgan & Co.

Close observers believe that eventually an association with New York Edison and affiliated companies may take place Among participants in negotiations were representatives of United Corp Schoellkopf interests and Cordon group. Believed that a New York holding company will be vehicle for the vast combination, the first stage of creation of a state-wide system of public utility properties. Financial circles expect following units will be included in new system: Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern Power Corp, Northeastern Power Corp, Mohawk-Hudson Power Corp., Rockland Light & Power Co. Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp., and Eastern States Power Corp

Asparagus Recipes

Martha Lee

ASPARAGUS is one of the best-liked vegetables on the table, and comes in two different varieties, the green and the white. The latter is more economical as well as delicious, as it comes in cans.

My husband and I are so fond of it that I try to buy two bunches when I can, so we can have some to use one noon, then together and use the last for the next day. Here are a few recipes I have used with success. I hope you will find them helpful for your luncheon today.

For an interesting left-over asparagus can be prepared in a delicious, baked beans. Arrange carefully with a cup or two of left-over asparagus in a deep, inch pieces. Pile on buttered toast and pour over them melted butter, or better yet Hollandaise sauce.

Asparagus au gratin is delicious, too, and a welcome change from the usual way of serving it. Cut the asparagus into inch pieces, and arrange in a buttered baking dish. Make the sauce as follows: Melt in a saucepan two tablespoons of butter, add two tablespoons of flour, and stir until smooth. Add one cup of milk and cook. Add salt to taste, and pour over asparagus. Sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 20 minutes.

Or, to use some asparagus from which the cream has been omitted, add four hard-cooked chopped eggs and the asparagus, one chopped pimento, a little chopped parsley and a few chopped olives to the sauce. Pour over toast and serve at once.

Cream of Asparagus Soup can be made with a foundation white sauce from three tablespoons of butter, three tablespoons of flour, two cups of milk and one cup of the water in which the asparagus boiled, two tablespoons of salt, one-quarter teaspoon of pepper. Add one cup cooked asparagus cut up very fine and one half cup of thick cream. Serve garnished with minced parsley.

Crab and Asparagus Salad is a delicious blend, one cup of crabmeat, marinated in French dressing for an hour, and one cup of asparagus tips cut in inch pieces. Add one third cup of chopped nuts, mixed lightly with the crab, together with a half cup of shredded crisp lettuce. Mix with your favorite dressing and serve at once.

Asparagus Pear and Cheese Salad is attractive. Arrange lettuce on individual plates. Cut two cans Bartlett pears in halves lengthwise, and place them like petals radiating from the center. Place a stalk of asparagus between each section of pear, making a flower. Among the centers of each pear section put a long thin strip of pimento. In the center of the flower put a small ball of cream cheese made into a pretty shape. Pour French dressing over all.

Old and New Paradises

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

THE paradise of old, according to the Tent-maker, was a place "where the loaf of bread, the jug of wine and thou beside me in the wilderness" were essential components. The modern Paradise is just the Beloved. Nothing else is needed. Any place they happen to be is Paradise for them, and why shouldn't it be?

Love needs nothing but itself to make for the perfect and complete happiness of those in love. Neither time nor place count in their calculations and the rest of the world goes by in a dreamy haze. Nothing is real except themselves and their love. They are, indeed, sufficient unto themselves.

Paradise is simply what you make it—a place where nothing but Love and Happiness dwells, where ugliness and harsh words and doubts have no place, where each lives but for the happiness of the other. Of course, the serpent sometimes does manage to enter, but true Love defies him and drives him away. Only the Love which is not of sufficient strength welcomes the serpent and listens to his temptings.

So make of your Love a Paradise wherein nothing but happiness, Peace and Contentment can dwell. For in this way alone will you find the true Romance and the Ideal Love which is your birthright.

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

BIDDING AND MAKING A SMALL SLAM

Auction Bidding: South passing West bids one Spade, which East denies by a bid of one No Trump.

Contract Bidding: West's Spade bid is overcalled by East with a forcing bid of three Clubs, which West raises to four, whereupon East bids a Small Slam.

Silent Points of Contract Bidding: While the same number of tricks can be made at No Trump as with Clubs the trump, East's logical forcing, take-out in denial of Spades is a three bid in his long and strong Club suit, rather than a two No Trump; not only because a forcing suit but would convey a much better picture of his particular type of holding, but because a two No Trump take-out, even though of a trick more than necessary, is a forcing bid only in the sense that it shows a probable game hand at No Trump if partner holds greater strength than shown by an original bid. For this reason, while East and West found it extremely simple to arrive at a Slam contract with a forcing take-out, they would not have found it so easy had East made a forcing No Trump take-out.

Play: There is absolutely nothing in the play of this hand, as South with a Small Slam bid against him has no choice but to lead his Spade A, following such lead, and make 12 Tricks—six Clubs, three Spades (two high Spades and an established long Spade), two Hearts and one Diamond; in fact, East could easily make a couple of more tricks by leading his Diamond ruffs—if permitted to count them.

Too Sensitive Women

By LUCY LOWELL

I HAVE had opportunity lately to observe one of those likeable women who seem always to be in hot water among their friends and acquaintances about the neighborhood.

This woman's trouble is not of a serious nature, having to do mostly with bits of criticism she chimes in directed her way from time to time. It is not serious criticism even as she sees it, being no more than a word here and there. But she is a sensitive soul and easily upset.

She told me a great deal about it at first and I felt extremely sorry for her since she was more or less at the mercy of not too kindly comment, as it seemed to me.

Later on, however, I began to wonder a little if some of it were not her own fault. And now I am sure that at least 50 per cent of what goes on is her fault. And I am wondering if this is not true in every case like hers.

To begin with, as I said, the woman is sensitive. Consequently she is always weighing words, considering looks, getting wounded even if they were meant exactly as they seemed or if something might be behind them. And, as I always in this case, sufficient brooding discloses to her all sorts of ulterior motives, hidden meanings, slights.

Not content with merely brooding, however, this woman will lay hold of whatever it is she fancies has been critical and will peddle it around. She will go from Mrs. A to Mrs. B telling Mrs. B what Mrs. A said and asking Mrs. B's opinion. From her she will go on to Mrs. C, repeating what both Mrs. A and Mrs. B said and adding her own ideas, conjectures, comments. And perhaps from her she will send it on to Mrs. D, telling her story all over again with Mrs. C's contribution.

Of course my friend cannot help being in a flurry all the time. The best way to kill criticism is to ignore it and the best way to be happy is to stop being sensitive.

Loss of Your Memory

By L. E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

PEOPLE often worry when they forget.

Yet forgetting has distinct advantages.

Have you ever stopped to think what it would mean if we remembered everything?

By remembering everything I mean being able consciously, and through an act of the will to recall at any given moment any thought, feeling or experience we may have had from the cradle up.

Needless to say our minds would soon be a hopeless muddle and hodge-podge.

But nature has provided against this contingency. It has given us an unconscious mind, a storehouse of memory, as it were, as a result of which no experience of the past we have ever had is ever lost. Everything we have ever experienced is stored away.

Just what this unconscious mind looks like, and exactly how our thoughts are arranged, nobody knows.

We do know, however, that certain parts of the brain have to do with certain functions. For instance, that the thought and mechanisms connected with vision are situated in the posterior part or rear of the brain.

We also know that the nerve cells controlling movements of the limbs are placed along a line near the middle of the top of the brain, along the so-called Fissure of Rolando.

In fact, the right half of the brain controls the right and the left half the left side of the body in most of its functions. Practically all of the work is done by the left side.

The unconscious mind is really nothing but a phase of the unconscious, that part of the unconscious of which you will, when we emerge in waking life that part of means of which we come into contact with the world in which we live and with the people with whom we associate.

Coming back to the faculty of forgetting, it is assumed that few, if any, ideas, impressions or experiences of any kind are absolutely forgotten.

Perhaps special effort or a special set of circumstances is required to bring back to consciousness the buried unconscious memory.

Nevertheless, practically every thought or idea or association that has emotion attached to it can be recalled somehow.

Yes, forgetting has advantages.

All of us have been thwarted in our ambitions, all have suffered in one way or another.

It's a good thing we cannot think of these things at the time or at the spur of the moment. If we did, we would be harping continually on the past and would probably do little if anything, else.

So, be grateful anyway about forgetting the ways of nature.

Everything that the body and mind does has a reason, a purpose behind it.

To keep on forgetting things which, on the surface, it would seem we ought to remember may be very annoying, if not deliberately alarming at times.

Nevertheless, ask yourself what the purpose of such forgetting may be. A little reflection may reveal to you the fact that it is far better to forget than remember.

Can There Be Happiness in Money Marriage?

By Beatrice Fairfax

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

MODERN girls marry for love. Of this there can be no doubt.

You will find that every authority interviewed on the ever-fascinating subject of the typical modern girl, agrees that she must rank, not for money, but for love alone.

Nevertheless, money is an important and necessary factor of courtship and marriage. Love, money and marriage are closely interdependent. If you doubt this ask the young man who wants to marry the Dearest Girl and hasn't money saved or a steady salary. Cupid, among other accomplishments, needs to be a clever financier!

If you read as many letters as I do from love-lorn young folks and discontented husbands and wives, you would realize that a large proportion of love problems center about money.

Anne dislikes going about with Bob because he can only afford to take her to cheap places. Charles loves Diane, but will not ask her to marry him because her parents are rich and he is earning a small salary. Dick has given up all thought of marriage; he cannot afford the luxury of a wife!

Emily has decided she will marry for money if she gets the chance, because she loves the things money buys. Fania's husband doles out dimes to her, although he is rich. Gloria is talented and longs for a career, but her husband is opposed to her earning money with her music as a matter of masculine pride! Kay is weary of earning her own living and carry the the two-fold burdens of her companionate marriage. She longs to be supported and protected by an old-fashioned husband, Jim cannot get anywhere, and is worried to death because his wife's extravagance and ignorance of money values keeps him in debt.

What is the solution of this problem of love versus money? Shall financial difficulties be permitted to throw a blighting shadow over love and love's self-realization through marriage?

Financial adjustment to love and marriage is a purely personal problem, a question each girl and young man, each couple must settle for themselves. Possibly, however, a few suggestions may not be amiss.

If money and the things money buys rank ahead of everything else in your thoughts and feelings, you may as well be honest with yourself, admit the fact and act accordingly. But do not be surprised if that case because romance, love and happiness are crowded out of your life.

Wealth of affection, appreciation of romance and beauty, spiritual riches, these are what count. Keep money in its proper place in the scheme of things. If you give it sole power by imputing to it sole importance, it will rule you as its miserable and abject slave.

Sensible girls are quite as well pleased with an ice-cream soda treat as with orchids, taxi, theater and supper, when they know the ice-cream soda is all the friend can honestly afford to spend. Many young men are held back by false pride and lack of firmness from taking an honest stand in the matter of expense.

A little courage, a little independence and good sense, with patience and optimism, usually solve money problems that otherwise might menace love. Couples like the Calvin Coolidges prove how independent fine living is of extravagant display. Choose the plan of thrift that appeals to you and your helpmate, then work it out with courage and persistent good humor.

A girl who tries to influence a young man to spend more than he can afford is not his friend. She would not make him happy if she married her.

Fresh air, friendship, sunlight, blue skies, walks, true affection, honesty, loyal love, common sense, youthful gaiety and fun cannot be bought or sold. They are free.

Face the financial situation honestly with the man who wishes to marry you. Discuss it freely and seek for a definite weekly allowance after marriage on which to run the house, from which to save for your own separate bank account.

Let common sense dictate how little you and he can live on at the start. Resolve to save. Then, regardless of money, you and the Dearest Man can grow ever richer in cultural life, happiness and love.

The SCARLET LADY

A SIX-DAY STORY

Up-to-Date Novel of Hasty Marriage—And After

But that was when she got out a pen and paper and laboriously wrote a note to Steve.

"Dear Stevie, I am writing to leave you know I got to get out of here. I am going back to the cabaret and won't have no more time to see you like we done lately. I am awful sorry about his Stevie, but I got to do it and as it is better if we do not see one another again. I am hoping you have all the luck and be a good boy like you always been—" that was blotted where a tear fell—"and thanks for all you done for your old friend, Myrtle."

Steve read Myrtle's note with an astonishment which gave way to disappointment and then to deep hurt.

Was he in love with Myrtle? The thought startled him at first; later it did not seem surprising, hanging in his mind all day Sunday while he moped about the club. What a friendship she had given him—what a pal she was! Why, in these few weeks they were closer than Ted and himself—Ted, whom he had known nearly all his life!

And how little she asked for all the interest and kindness and understanding she offered.

It was Sunday evening when he began to miss her with an almost unbearable sense of loss. And it was then he knew himself to be wholly, exultantly in love . . .

Early Monday he telephoned the office he would be absent till noon. Then he took the street car to the east end and the little flat.

The windows looked blank somehow; Steve could see from the street that the curtains were down.

He quickened his step, dashed up the stairs, tapped at the door. No answer. But the latch gave; he went in.

He stood without speaking while she wiped a corner of apron across her eyes, gave him a wan smile in a strained tone he said, "Why, Mystie? You didn't tell me. If there's that you wish to go then?"

"Oh! Well, you got enough without listenin' to my troubles, Stevie. They wasn't any job for you and—Stevie, I ain't goin' to act this way nohow. Sure I didn't want to go but what else is there? I guess hard luck is all in the day's work, big boy. I'll get along plenty good enough."

He put his arms around her, drew her head to his shoulder before she knew what was happening. "If you'll not mind feeding a hungry man twice a day and three times on Sundays and putting up with whatever other hardships Mrs. Steven Farraday will have to put up with. If you'll take the place—Myrtle, if you'll marry me—"

She was out of his arms and on her feet, white and shaking, putting up her hands to keep him away as he would have gone to her. "Did—you say—marry you?" she gasped. "You said—marry you, Stevie?"

"You couldn't? This surprises you so, dear? You couldn't care enough?"

Her fingers flew to her throat, she tried to speak, but no words passed her lips.

He came to her, pulled her hands from her face and kissed her, held her close and she clung to him, half crying, half laughing, torn from the crumbling old resolutions which had held her so long.

But she would tell him nothing definite, she must think.

So he went away, but Myrtle found that she could not think. It seemed incredible that Steve wished to marry her—a dream from which she would awaken any minute. Marry Steve!

Finally in desperation, she hurried to the old rookery where she used to live, sought out Ted. She told what had happened, withholding only Steve's name. "What should I do, Ed? I want to be square.

"If husbands is goin' ole kid, you better grab while the grabbin's good."

"I want to be square, I tell you." "Square! Hell, he's a man, ain't he?"

Ed's philosophy—and it did not help Myrtle.

There was no money with which to buy the makings of dinner for Steve so she went on to the flat just to sit and wait, no nearer a decision than she had been when she left.

It occurred to her now that she might tell Steve her story, starting with the beginning, putting before him every step of the way she had gone since '05, and then she crept through the hedge at the orphanage and went scuttling down the road. At least she would be sure then that he understood—knew what sort of girl he meant to marry.

But panic seized her. Supposing it would turn him so he would walk back and leave her alone. Oh, she would like to marry Stevie—start over and be happy. Every woman had a right to that—in some happiness. To security. More than anything to security!

And she asked no accounting of what he might have done; she wished to know nothing of his past. Why then, did he have a right to hers?

She hadn't thought of this before. Let bygones go; let Stevie have the bygones which belonged to him and let her keep hers—why, wasn't this the way out? Nobody's business, really, in taking the other for what the other was now? This was fair—why, of course, this was the way out!

This was the way! Now she could marry Steve—she had found the way!

Steve took Ted aside in the afternoon, told his errand in his direct, boyish way. "I'm going to marry Myrtle Corbin, Ted. If she'll have me."

"Myrtle Corbin? Not—well, I mean—"

"Yes. She's not in the cabaret any more—hasn't been for a long time." And seeing his friend's dazed look, Steve put out his hand. "Wishing me luck, aren't you?"

"Luck? Oh—" then, quickly, "All the luck there is, old pal! Count on me, you know? She's a—a great girl, Stevie."

Ted told his wife at dinner that evening. And, lazily waffling 'till the delicatessen cream-puff dessert was out of the way, Penelope managed to pass the story along to Jessie Norris.

Myrtle was waiting when his name being called, grew straight in one of the wicker chairs, hands folded in her laps, eyes filled with soft light, lips moving as she argued with herself.

He hurried into the room as was his wont, flung himself down at her feet, caught her hands and kissed them, his face.

"Well, Myrtle? Well? It's all right? I know it's all right! I'm going to be good to you—always—always."

"I don't know, Stevie. I just can't marry you, dear. I—I can't."

"Listen, sweetheart; there's a bungalow building right next to Ted's place. Almost finished. A grate where logs will burn and a sunroom and the cunningest dining nook off the kitchen . . . I saw the agent today. They'll let it go cheap if we take it as it stands. We could do that; finish it ourselves later on . . . I've got enough saved for a payment—almost half the cost . . . Lady, lady, you'd love it! Windows upstairs that open like doors—casements, they're called. And a gas range already in—not a stinky, lousy kitchen stove got here but an honest-to-goodness ritzy stove with two ovens."

"Steve—you're sure you want me? Just like I am—me? You won't be sorry some day—you're sure of that? Some day you won't be sorry?"

He took her in his arms.

They decided to send Myrtle's things to Lakeville at the end of the week, and they would move over to Prospect street, to a cheap little family hotel, to live till the new house was ready. Steve would ask for Saturday off and they would be married then.

And Saturday, almost at dawn, Myrtle was ready. No trousseau—not even a new handkerchief, not she never gave it a thought. The brown cloth suit she had worn through the weary weeks of job hunting had been pressed again and the brown felt hat brushed and steamed and the tan shoes, worn very thin indeed of soles, all nicely polished. Not very bridelike, this girl who stood in the first rays of the sun but she was looking beyond the day and into the future, hoping, resolving, praying a bit in a disconnected, wordless fashion.

Steve brought a carriage of peach-colored rosebuds with streamers of tan at the back and pinned it to her jacket, saying softly, "For my bride." And she had to keep wiping her eyes as he led her down to the street saying happy, silly things, telling her little jokes and acting as if they merely were going out for another holiday at Shaker Lake.

She knew why he had looked shy then, for there was a car at the curb. Nothing grand; just a rather jaunty little roadster he had borrowed from one of the fellows at the office.

They thought you like it better than the train, lady. Everything's all aboooom now and the trees on the—"

"Stevie dear, Stevie, dear!"

Every day Myrtle went to the new house.

She would get up mornings an hour before Steve opened his eyes and be herself over the gas ring which coupled one end of the bathroom and was dignified by the name of kitchenette by the management, the family hotel being the sort which catered to genteel poverty.

After coffee was made Myrtle would put over eggs to boil in a saucepan and then set this aside to prepare the toast. And at this point she would awaken he, husband.

She would ride the short distance into town with him, there to shop sweetly, prying into the market, heard of places for rugs, chairs, kitchen ware, things for the new house buying at a price which amazed him.

"But they can't be worth much cheap as that," he would protest.

"Wait till you see! The grandest dinin'-room pieces — 'course they need a coat of varnish, but what's that? I got some new kind of enamel for the bedroom set and it makes things look like a million dollars."

"See here, Myrt—don't go to killing yourself over that house—you hear me? Looking kind of tired, you are—"

"Take a lot to kill me and I'm not tired." He laughed, gave him a surreptitious pat before he bolted toward the office.

In the meantime the bridge players had met and held a session over Steve's bride. Young Farraday, favorite of everyone on the street, had married a girl with a past.

"Well, I must say—" Tea from Mrs. Ranier's bridge tips were very thin at the moment.

Jessie twisted her lean shoulders in a way she thought chic, who had been listening to the buzz with an air of bored detachment yawned elaborately and said that all made her tired.

"This Myrt has her points, pussies, and I'm tired of her always being through back roads with the lights out." She gave Mrs. Ranier a knowing grin and the others giggled. "For my part I'm hoping she'll put some life into this dead and buried dump."

Some of the wives drew shocked breaths. But Penelope had been shocking them rather often of late. Little Mrs. Bird pricked up her ears, turning her sleeked and shingled head like a robin sighting a worm.

"You mean you'll call on her, Penny? After all—"

Certainly," answered the other imperiously. "And since when," she drawled, "did you get so righteous, Lily?"

Little Mrs. Bird blushed. At the last club dance she had sat out an intermission with a most unseemly flirtation of the club Lochinvar.

"I was going to say," she remarked hurriedly, "that after all Mrs. Farraday will be a neighbor now."

They all laughed, and watching sight of Myrtle lugging a mop and pail through the street declared a shop must be put to such doings.

Penelope had a new gown, black tulle, which made her look very exotic, very much the aeneanio writer's conception of the siren.

Jessie crossed the room and ran over in her life before, first putting out Ted's dinner clothes.

For tonight they were dining with Jessie Ford.

Not altogether easy, manipulating this invitation, yet not too difficult for she understood Ford's type, if not the man himself. A handsome middle-aged figure, fond of the pleasures of his wife fifty years ago; a successful business man wealthy beyond dreams; patron of art and music; host by a single weakness—beautiful women.

His interest had been aroused when first she visited his office—she knew this. And made an excuse to return a second time. He talked to her then, showed her a painting which hung in his private suite . . . invited her to bring Ted to his house.

"Would love it!" She was almost naive in her triumph.

Ted had wished to go. He was silent, rather grim when she chattered about the opportunity. In justice Penelope must be explained that all her thought—now at least—was for her husband's welfare.

Thinking it all over next day, considering every tiny detail, weighing this against that, recalling each word Harlan Ford had spoken, every shade of expression in his dark, slant-corner eyes, Penelope decided the party had been a great success.

Of course, Ted harshly had done his part, sitting without a word most of the evening, refusing to eat the briefest comment when they were back here to see the paintings of which he seemed so proud.

They had been a gay and colorful company at the princely Ford dwelling more like a museum than a home.

What Penelope remembered most gleefully out of the whole evening —what she hugged to herself in a victorious, exultant way—was the moment she had been isolated with Ford.

"An old fellow like me gets lonely all by himself. Longs to see a charming woman across the table—could it be managed?"

She had giggled a bit awkwardly, pretended indignation. "Old fellow indeed! Why, you're the youngest man here tonight! And I do get into the city now and then."

Then made an engagement. She was to meet him at the Hallowell and they would decide where to go.

With her instinct for dramatizing herself, Penelope saw herself as a power working silently, surely; moving men and circumstances by one of those wills to whom everybody would point some day and say, "See—her husband is the famous Theodore Beach. Owes everything to her. Marvelous, isn't she? A great mind—"

It was on an afternoon a week later that Jessie came in, dressed in her best and looking rakish. "I'm going to call on the Scarlet Lady," she announced with a grin.

Penelope was irritated. She herself had decided to call on Myrtle, but her love for the spectacular demanded that she be the first of the wives to do this. She wished to shock the others a bit—be the leader.

To be sure Myrtle had shown no evidence of wild life in the week she and Steve had lived in Lakeville. Ted and later Penelope could see her working about the house divided only by a sizeable stretch of lawn and a low hedge from her own.

The wives who had been half prepared to run her had been given no opportunity, for Myrtle did not seem to care whether she made friends.

And now Jess had stolen Penelope's plan; she was about to open a trail to the door of the new house, be the first to make a report to the bridge players.

But not if Penelope knew her stuff!

"Funny thing, darling—I was just going over there myself. Do wait just a minute—so much nicer to go together—"

They walked across the lawn and lifted the brightly polished knocker on the door of the new house. And their summons was answered, at once—quickly for style—by a big, smiling girl in a gingham house dress and apron; a girl with hair a trifle disheveled and a smudge on her cheek and no embarrassment in her manner before the elegance of her callers.

"Land-o-gracious!" Myrtle cried. "Walk right in, ladies! It's sure sweet of you runnin' over like this, leavin' your work and all. I ain't got round to dustin' real good today yet, they's that much to be done." She polished chairs with her apron. "I guess you can set right down here and not spoil them nice clothes, I s'pose you know, though, what it is gettin' a new house settled. It's—"

She seated herself, facing her guests, and they exchanged glances, wondering what to say.

HIDDEN FIRES

CHAPTER 27

"WELL!" ejaculated Eleanor Howell when she bumped into Ruth a few moments later as she was mounting the stairs to her room, "a fine mess this is! How are you going to explain it to your good-looking sheik?"

"I don't know," said Ruth miserably. "Who ever could have imagined that your old Col. Drinkwater would know her, and bring her over to this very house party?"

"There's nothing to do now but carry on. I've never had a house party yet that was a flop, and I'm not old to start in now. But it's up to you to make your own explanations to the good-looking sheik."

"Call him Don Carlos," snapped Ruth. "Where did the colonel meet her? She's only been here a short time."

"Coming down on the boat, he tells me."

"I wish that I'd never suggested the old house party," said Ruth disconsolately. "It will be frightfully hard to explain to Don Carlos."

Eleanor indulged in little female cattiness. She was a thoroughly normal woman, was Eleanor Howells. "That's your end of the rope, my dear. Something warned me about that young man."

"Oh, never fear about Don Carlos. He'll be polite enough—before others. But he won't be happy. And I did so want him to have a good time."

"Here comes Al," Eleanor called, as she left Ruth. "Maybe he can help you out." She disappeared toward the kitchen.

Phew! Al remonted, "What a fine tempest in a teapot you've stirred up."

Ruth was indignant.

"What do you mean, I stirred up? I suppose I'm to blame for old Col. Drinkwater knowing Mrs. Whiting and bringing her to this ranch!"

Ruth's nerves were getting the best of her.

Al decided that he was wisest who decided to live to fight another day. So he went toward the stables where he could hear Paul Howells and his guests talking.

Ruth was hurt by his failure to help her. Hot tears sprang to her eyes. Such moments were created for the Jimmy Adams of the world. Jimmy had come over to find out where the luau was to be held tomorrow. And he found Ruth in tears.

"Ruth! What on earth has happened?"

It was her first meeting since her marriage and Ruth would have preferred that he had seen her smiling and happy.

Then she pulled herself together. It was Al's fault, anyway.

"Oh, hello, Jimmy. How are you?" she called.

"I'm fine. But what about yourself?" Jimmy asked solicitously. "Why all the gloom, Ruth? You don't like you?" He looked appreciatively at her.

"Nothing! I've just got a case of nerves." Then, as she thought again of the situation which confronted her, she burst into sobs.

"Oh, Jimmy! I'm in the worst mess!" she cried.

Just why should she be telling Jimmy Adams, whom she hadn't seen for months, all about Don Carlos and his wife, and the whole affair, was beyond her. Oh why Jimmy was always had acted so confidential her, even in his love-making, should be taking her into his arms, and comforting her was likewise beyond them both.

But there they stood, outlined against the lacy background of the palm tree which stood in the hotel's front yard, an open target for the hurt eyes of Al Harding. Ruth saw his look, but for the life of her she couldn't have moved at that moment.

Don Carlos, coming onto the lanai as the dinner hour neared, saw but the slim outline of a well-shod foot hanging over the edge of the chaise-lounge. He didn't look like any of the shoes he ever seen on Eugenie's feet, but doubtless he had not seen all of her shoes. He tiptoed up to the vision outstretched in the cool recesses of the lanai, the shadows were deepening up on the corner. It was an intriguing place for a little bit of mischief.

He put the tips of his fingers over cool eyelids; bent over to kiss the one lying there.

But in place of a dark head, he saw one of spun gold.

"Oh!" he breathed quickly. "I beg your pardon." Doubtless, he was one of the other guests. He hadn't seen all of them.

Eve recognized his voice. Then as she saw the weird look on his face she burst into gales of laughter.

"Well! It's Mr. Don Carlos Whiting. I presume. This is rich. If you're asking me, I'd say it was. So you're a member of Pinkham's party, too. Well, I promised to be an exciting one. I course you. All it needs to make it perfect would be for you to have that colored woman for a partner at the same house party with your wife. Phew! That would be a hot one! But then, I've always heard that these islands were hot skeletons when it came to mixing breeds and races. "I hear the footsteps of a second guest coming down the hall," she mocked derisively. "I must admit that she doesn't look colored."

The footsteps of Sara which this woman aroused in him every time she opened her lips!

Don Carlos clenched his hards dug the nails into the palms. He said nothing. What was there to say?

"This has sort of knocked you speechless, my dear husband, hasn't it?" Eve continued. "You never were at a loss for words in he olden days in Sausilito. Why not enjoy the situation? It might give you an idea for a new play—even I admit that this is one. A wife who is hated under the same roof with a sweetheart who is adored—and the sweetheart colored."

"Stop!" Don Carlos commanded Eve jumped, so shrill was the sound.

"Well, Mr. Don Carlos Whiting. Your manners haven't improved any, I must say. Only you used to be a bit polite up. Let me tell you one thing—you'd better stop look and listen to me, if you know what's best for you. I've got you in the palm of my hand, Mr. Author. Don't forget that. Try and annoy me, if you can. I won't give you one. That's that. You've nothing on me."

"If you're going to be nasty about it, Eve," he intimated, "I could dig up a few skeletons myself. I'd hate to have Sara Dawson and Ted Hunt—but what about George Phillips, and the reason why I left home?"

"Humph! The home which I made and supported, you mean. Humph! That would sound pretty, coming out in a divorce court down there where you are now a social lion wouldn't it?"

Father and Son -:- Short Story by William Allen Ward

THE Texas sunset was a masterpiece painted on the western horizon. But a man cannot enjoy art on an empty stomach, especially if said emptiness had started some two days before.

Jim Winters, big shouldered and with dreamy melancholy eyes, shook the dust out of a Panhandle sandstorm off his ragged coat, and leaned against a telegraph pole. He looked into the sunset—that masterpiece of art, painted by the Greatest of Artists who used a sunbeam for a brush and the blue sky for a canvas, but he did not see the great painting; instead he saw steaks, beefsteaks, smothered in onions; black coffee, creamed potatoes. Jim Winters was hungry.

Three hundred yards from the railroad, along which Jim was traveling into the sunset, was the small cottage of a homesteader. Jim surveyed the landscape with a deep interest and pondered on the wisdom of inquiring of the tenants if they could spare a meal for a traveling man.

Jim crawled beneath the wire of the eight-strand barb fence and started across the newly plowed ground toward the homesteader's cottage. Smoke curled upward from the cottage chimney while a woman, apparently still in her twenties, buried handful after handful of grain to the fowls that flocked about her. In the barnyard, a man was busily engaged milking the cows.

Jim walked slowly as he meditated. He viewed a picture which to him, was greater than the sunset. He saw a picture of happiness and content.

In an instant Jim's mind, unscrupulously forcing back thoughts of food, went back through the years and he dreamed of what might have been. He visioned in his mind a little home, a wife and the kiddies, all of which might have been his—if he had kept his word and gone straight.

Jim had broken faith with Nancy. He was back in Chicago, that Nancy had pawned her jewels to obtain counsel and beat the burglary case against him and then married him when his name was clear. Then the landscape with a wolf call of the underworld and scurry'd away to join the pack.

After being married less than a year, Jim broke faith with Nancy and staged a stick-up in Chicago's loop. The judge said 20 years and Jim joined his brothers in crime in the somber cells of the Stint City—the home of broken men, so called by some the State Penitentiary.

Jim remained behind the walls but a short time before his chance came—then he "outran the guns." Ee read in the papers a few days later that he had been killed in the getaway, killed when the fire of guards set an old hay barn on fire. Jim knew that Old Briggs, negro life-timer, who made the dash with him, was the one who perished in the barn, but he kept his secret. Jim hit the long road—leaving Nancy behind.

"This home might have been mine . . ." Jim was thinking as he approached the woman who still fed the chickens. A little boy, about five years old, was running about the yard, happy as the March wind that whipped over the hills.

"Lady," called Jim in a feeble voice, for he was very weak.

The woman did not hear. Jim was about to call again when he got a glimpse of her face and whispered to himself, "Nancy."

Jim was hungry. For just a moment he pondered—then he turned away, determined to leave Nancy with her happiness. He slipped away as carefully as possible—he thought Nancy hearing him. Once he had the cottage between him and Nancy he felt relieved, although hunger still tore at his vitals like a hungry rat.

"Hey, mister," a little voice piped.

Jim turned around. He looked into the smiling face of Nancy's little boy. Jim did not remember just how he looked, for he had not viewed himself in the mirror for a long while, but he saw a resemblance, and he remembered that Nancy had whispered to him her secret before he went away.

"Nancy's boy . . ." Jim whispered. "Nancy's boy . . . and mine!" he added.

"Hey, mister . . ." the boy called again.

Jim couldn't think of anything to say. His heart jumped up in his throat and choked him. For the first time in his life Jim was terribly nervous. Jim had never been worried a great deal with his conscience. But this time the old gentleman called Conscience rose right up and gave him a terrific wallop. Jim surely felt mean in his life.

"Where's your dad?" finally asked Jim, "out yonder in the cow lot?"

"He's not my real daddy," the boy replied, "he's my step-daddy, my real daddy's dead."

"Dead!" exclaimed Jim, "how do you know?"

"Mamma told me so," the lad said, "and she told me he was a good man and the best darned any little boy ever had . . . and my mama don't tell stories . . . my daddy was a good man!"

For a full minute Jim looked into the sunset and this time he saw a picture there . . . a home where he wanted to go. Slowly, as twilight crept over the prairie, Jim walked into the sunset. Hunger again tore at his vitals, but he smiled for a child had shown him the way.

MOTHER OF 12 UNMOVED BY JAIL TERM

Fort Smith, Ark., June 13 (AP)—A 36-year-old mother who pleaded guilty to a prohibition law violation that her husband might be freed t ocare for their 12 children, today made ready for her journey to the federal industrial prison at Alderson, W. Va., for imprisonment for 18 months.

Admitting responsibility for the liquor business, officers said they found on the couple's farm, 30 miles north of here, Mrs. Joe Post heard her sentence and a $100 fine without a qualm after similar charges against her husband had been dropped.

A leniency plea by defense counsel, who cited the woman's large family and her previous clear record, brought little sympathy from the bench. Judge Frank A. Youmans replied:

"It is too bad Theodore Roosevelt is no longer living." He explained his remark applied to the late President's fondness for large families and Mr. Roosevelt's sympathy for erring parents. Mrs. Post has been the mother of 16 children, four of whom died.

BEBE DANIELS SIGNED TO MAKE EIGHT FILMS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, June 13—What with all the stage folk clutter-ing up our best cafes and occupying the most prominent seats at our theaters it is certainly gratifying that one of our own motion picture girls is about to get a break in the movies.

Bebe Daniels, who signed for four pictures for R-K-O, had her contract torn up and thrown into the waste paper basket, in place of the four pictures she has been given a new contract for eight pictures, all because her test for "Rio Rita" were such a knockout that William Le Baron wants to be sure of keeping her right in his own company.

"Dixiana," a special operetta with a New Orleans locale by Harry Tierney and Anne Caldwell, has been written around Bebe. Bebe will again sing and dance and play an exotic beauty from the South. Although in "Rio Rita" she plays a Spanish girl, in "Dixiana" she will play a French girl.

"Rio Rita," I should say, will take most of the summer and part of the fall. "Dixiana" will not be started until late fall or winter.

LOOKS as if Broadway will not see Ruth Chatterton this season. Paramount has other plans for her, and when a girl has a contract that she likes as much as Ruth likes her present film engagement she isn't anxious to make any changes. John Colton is adapting a French play for A. H. Woods, and they have now decided that Miss Chatterton is the logical heroine, but unless Ruth can finish the picture of films there isn't a chance of her leaving Hollywood.

Ruth and Ralph Forbes, by the bye, are very happy these days. They have just taken a house at Malibu Beach, where they will stay until Ruth begins work on "Sins and Son," her next picture for Paramount. Pay Bainter, Ruth's closest friend, and the small son of Miss Bainter, are moving into the Malibu House to be guests of the Forbes' during the run of the play.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, 3000 miles away in New York, didn't forget that he had to find a leading lady for Ronald Colman in "Condemned." Looking the field over in New York, and casting a speculative eye over the stage favorites here in Hollywood, he decided Ann Harding was just the girl. Fortunately, he was able to negotiate with Miss Harding, so that she and Dudley Digges will be two of the players in the Colman drama.

What with the success of "Bulldog Drummond," Sam's latest talkie, he is anxious to get another cast lined up for him proud. Miss Harding started in life as a child girl at Paramount studios. Later, she played in "Tarnish" and with the Provincetown Players, and was a sensation. Today she is regarded as one of the most talented of the younger generation of actresses.

THE Hollywood dictionary is being rewritten each and every day. No one has any way of knowing just how long these stage folk will remain out here, but while they do have, believe me, it is difficult to keep up with the new faces in the various studios. Take Ralph Sinclair, an English actor of big reputation in London. His name doesn't mean anything in Hollywood, yet the Fox Co. announces with great delight that he has been brought here to play the lead in "Sky Hawk." I suppose if the picture turns out to be a worthy successor to "Wings," the name Sinclair will no longer be an "Unknown Quantity." Fox has the second lead. He has just finished an engagement at the Belasco Theater in New York with Lenore Ulrich in "Mima."

PLENTY of things are happening these days in Hollywood. I saw Robert Milton. He was standing at the Hotel Roosevelt with Guy Bolton and Arthur Hornblow. He tells me he is leaving our fair Hollywood in a few months to go to Russia and produce in that city for Moscow Art Players.

Mrs. Molly Malone, mother of Phyllis Haver, paused from her marketing long enough to tell me that Phyllis and Billy Seaman are in Berlin and are radiantly happy. They return home in July Lestrice Joy was lunching with her brother and Arthur Stuart Hull at the Roosevelt. Lestrice has lost a lot of weight and she looks very smart in her new summer clothes.

The Louis B. Mayers are entertaining at their beautiful home in Santa Monica Sunday. Louis is also in the 25th anniversary of their marriage. Mrs. Harold Lloyd is giving May McAvoy a shower on Saturday at the new Lloyd mansion in Beverly Hills.

FRANK FAY would need an introduction to his own mother if she were to see him today. His part in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" calls for dark hair and he has dyed his red locks black—as deep a black you have ever seen. What with Technicolor, the carrot top of Fay would have come out in all its glory. The first day Fay came home to his wife, Barbara Stanwyck, she took one look at him and burst into tears, sobbing that his entire personality would be destroyed.

Frank, by the way, acted as master of ceremonies at the Hotel Roosevelt the other night. He was very good and it was certainly wonderful for Hollywood to hear such headliners as Fannie Brice, Bert Wheeler and others who are here from New York making films.

Mrs. Willebrandt to Carry Symbolical Bottle of Water

New York, June 13 (AP)—Mayor Walker is to give Mrs. Mabel W. Willebrandt a bottle. It will be filled with water from the Atlantic ocean and will be dumped into the Pacific by the mayor of Los Angeles as a symbol of the closer union of the coasts in an air-mail transportation system.

CUPID AIDED IN SPEEDING WAR DEBT PACT

Cleveland, June 12 (AP)—The engagement of Miss Esther Christenson, Cleveland debutante, exerted an unexpected influence at the reparations conference in Paris and is expected now has been permanently left upon the negotiations there, she said today.

Miss Christenson is the fiancee of Charles J. Young, eldest son of Owen D. Young, head of the American delegation to the conference, and while the negotiations lagged it appeared for a time that Mr. Young would be unable to attend the wedding here Saturday.

But while still engaged in the meetings, Mr. Young sent Miss Christenson a radiogram that by all means he would bring the delegates to some kind of an agreement in time. He sailed from France last week and probably will fly here from New York in order to be present for the ceremony.

U. S. Irrigation Expert in Russia

Moscow, June 13 (AP)—Arthur Davis, American irrigation expert, arrived in Moscow today and will shortly go through the middle Asia to direct a huge series of irrigation projects undertaken by the Soviet government.

Soviet leaders hope that with Mr. Davis' aid Russian engineers may solve complex problems themselves, thus furthering fulfilment of plans for extensive cotton planting.

One Killed in Car Crash, Three Hurt

Gary, Ind., June 13 (INS)—Bernard J. Kelley, 27, steel worker, died today of injuries sustained when his automobile failed to negotiate an "S" turn and crashed into a tree. Three others were injured. One, Francis Grimni, of Syracuse, N. Y., may die.

SCREEN STAR LAUDS TAX CAMPAIGN

Over the telephone wires from the Warner Brothers studio in Hollywood today came the voice of Gertrude Olmstead into the offices of the Boston Evening American.

The fair screen star responded to greet the readers of the American and to congratulate the newspaper on its fight for reductions in the federal income tax.

The long distance interview was arranged by Tod Browning, representative of the Publix Theaters in Boston. Two of these houses, the Fenway and Washington Street Olympia, will feature Miss Olmstead's latest talking picture, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," during the evening of the holidaying.

"I want you to know that all Hollywood is stirred up by the great work the Hearst newspapers are doing on behalf of all of us," came the star's voice over the wires.

"You know, an actress is just as much a working person as is the carpenter or the bricklayer. We put in a hard day's work for our wages. We are faced by the same problems of making both ends meet which at times perplex every family whose income is derived from their personal exertions.

"We are all glad to pay our just share of the maintenance of the government, but in view of the many taxes that are imposed by the various states and cities and personal property, and by the government on imports and manufacturing profits all the real relief would seem as though the actual money which a person makes should be looked upon as his or her very own."

KIDDIES TO SEE MAGIC FEATS

Hundreds of children in Greater Boston institutions will be made happy through four special shows by Harry Blackstone, famous magician, next week. The shows will be under auspices of the Boston Evening American and Keith-Albee-Orpheum theater, where Blackstone appears next week.

On Tuesday morning at 9:30 Blackstone will entertain the 250 crippled and deformed children at Massachusetts Special School, Canton, presided over by Dr. John Rich.

On Wednesday morning a performance will be given at the convalescent home of Children's Hospital on Forest st., Wellesley, while on Thursday morning Blackstone will perform for the 200 kiddies at St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum in Camden st., South End. The day following he will entertain the little sufferers at New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children at Newton Center.

Mr. Blackstone plans to leave a rabbit or two at each place as souvenirs of his visit.

Plan Show for Irish Fair Workers

A vaudeville show and dance will be held at the Boston Garden this evening in behalf of the performers who participated in the Irish Fair recently and who are still waiting for their wages because of the sudden departure of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, the much advertised "Roger O'Ryan."

Manager Fairbanks of the Boston Garden has donated the use of the place and performers booked for the show have also consented to give their services gratis.

The show will start at 8 p. m. and at the conclusion of the vaudeville dancing will be held until 1 a. m.

Honor Group Elects at Northeastern

The last Northeastern University Senate meeting of the year will take place tomorrow evening in Huntington Building. At this time all remaining eligible seniors will be elected to the honorary society of the School of Engineering by the present 17 members.

The officers of the society, which represents the highest honor attainable by an undergraduate, are Professor James H. Fitzpatrick, Fitchburg; Vice-President, John A. Anderson, '29, Concord; Secretary-Treasurer, Harold F. Wilson, '29, Dorchester, and Faculty Advisor, Prof. James W. Ingalls.

Lowell Firm to Enlarge Quarters

Lowell, June 13—Due to expansion of its business, the Butterfield Printing Co., now located in Middle st., has acquired 21,000 square feet of floor space on the fourth floor of the No. 5 mill of the Appleton Co. The printing company, which will have twice as much space as it occupies at present, will move the latter part of the month.

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Why Not Boost Beauty of N. E. to New Englanders?

Travel bureaus, hotel associations, individual hotels and resorts throughout New England, have been doing a valiant task for some months past educating the public of the nation to the attractions which New England has to offer as a vacation land.

Without doubt, these several campaigns have done much to focus the attention of prospective travelers from the South and Midwest and other regions of the country upon our hills and mountains and shores and forests.

One wonders, however, whether New England resort directors are not overlooking a vast potential field of patronage right here at home. The millions of residents of New England have vacations to spend, just as do the residents of other regions, they possess about one-sixth of the wealth of the Nation. They love their homeland.

What attempt has been made to teach the State-of-Mainer the charm of the Berkshires as contrasted with the familiar allurements of his own home bailiwick? Why aren't the inland communities of Massachusetts better represented among the summer residents of our lovely Cape Cod?

Resort owners should sell New England to New Englanders. A client who has brought his family to a resort from a distance of fifty or a hundred miles is likely to have a larger residue of spending money on hand than the one who has migrated a thousand miles or two, and who faces the expense of a like trip on the return home.

'El' Patrons May Descend Steps Now Without 'Fear'

How many patrons of the Boston Elevated Railway have experienced a quaking sensation of timidly defiant law-breaking when they have walked down a short flight of steps in the Park Street subway in the face of a sign which forbade such usage?

The stairs are those which lead from the north-bound street car level to the lower tracks of the Cambridge-Dorchester tunnel. They are convenient to passengers arriving at Park street who wish to transfer to the South Station or points beyond.

For several years, passengers have been slithering down these steps which the Elevated had disposed for the use of up-coming voyagers. It is safe to wager that the downward flight of many was made palpitant with fear of summary arrest and incarceration.

Now the Elevated takes gracious cognizance of the fact that stairs are made for going down as well as climbing up. The hardy passenger now faces nothing more terrifying than a black-lettered command to "Keep to the Right." Thus the El majestically bows to the public will without actual or tactual surrender of principle.

Appeal of Brotherhood

The appeal of brotherhood has a knack of wiping away political, religious and racial lines. This human trait comes out most strongly in cases of tragedy, misfortune and disaster.

In Woburn lives a young man whose activities were abruptly suspended in the height of a brilliant athletic career. Charles Fowler, one of the most promising amateur athletes of eastern Massachusetts, suffered the tragedy of an amputation.

Recently the Woburn High School Athletic Association, under the inspiration of Coach "Chuc" Connors, staged a play for his benefit. Every seat was taken.

On the coming holiday all members of the local Kiwanis, Knights of Columbus, the City Government, all athletic associations and townspeople generally are banding together to put over a great field day for him.

The affair merits support for its own sake and for the sentiment which prompts it.

Single and Lonesome

Humorists are poking fun at Henry Schwering, who, at eighty, married a woman half his age. He explained that he had been lonely all his life and wanted feminine companionship and devotion before he died. That is what seems funny to some folk, silly to others.

In simple truth, there is nothing ridiculous about it. It was a serious, sad and wise decision. The man who lives and dies a bachelor misses at least two-thirds of the happiness of life, for he never experiences the love of a wife and children. Henry Schwering showed wisdom in seizing what he could of the happiness available to him.

And loneliness is not so bad a reason for marriage. Indeed, were the truth known, half the marriages in the country would be found based more on that than any other condition.

Matrimony is no panacea, but those who enter that state after enduring the desperation of loneliness would return only in rare instances to what is cynically termed single blessedness, if the true significance of loneliness were vivid in their minds.

Buck Up, World's Yours

A master in a Boston high school, commenting upon the work of one of his boys, said to the parent, "He is a good boy, but he does not seem to be able to learn the value of time."

This is only too true of hundreds of high school boys today. They are good boys. They are well intentioned, obedient, upright and honest. But they can't be made to realize what precious diamonds they are letting slip through their fingers.

Thousands of boys today are shiftless. They lack vision. They dawdle in their walk and drawl in their talk. They need snap, ginger, sparkle, enthusiasm.

Buck up, boys. Make yourselves alert. Dash the cobwebs from your thinking apparatus. The world is yours.

The Ground Flier

By FRANKLIN COLLIER

IT SURE IS GREAT TO GET AWAY ON A VACATION TO A PLACE WHERE I WON'T HAVE TO HEAR A J.S. MOTOR AT CLOSE RANGE FOR A WEEK.
I'LL JUST SIT AND WATCH 'EM A BARGE OVER!
HANGED IF THAT DOESN'T LOOK LIKE THE OLD EAGLE BRICK THAT I FLEW ALL LAST SUMMER. BOY, HOW SHE CAN HANDLE!
BET THAT IS MIKE HARLOW PUSHING HER AROUND UP THERE. MIKE ISN'T A BAD FLIER EITHER. WONDER WHERE HE'S GOING?
THERE IS NO REASON THAT A FLIER COULDN'T SET HIS SHIP DOWN IN THAT FIELD BEYOND THE HOTEL.
IF TO HAVE KNOWN THAT PLACE WAS SO LARGE TO HAVE FLOWN UP HERE
NOT FOR ME!
I BET IT'S BUMPY UP THERE TODAY WITH ALL THIS WIND. NEXT YEAR IM GOING TO HAVE A FLYING BOAT SO I CAN COME IN ON THE WATER HERE, AND TAKE YOU GIRLS UP FOR A REAL THRILL.
AND WE ONLY HAD A CEILING OF 300 FEET, BUILDIEVE ME, WE WERE LUCKY TO GET THROUGH WITH THAT MOTOR AWSING—ANY TIME YOU GIRLS ARE AT THE BOSTON AIRPORT ASK FOR ME, AND I'LL TAKE YOU ALL UP!
BACK FROM THE OLD VACATION
GEE, THAT SURE WAS SOME VACATION I HAD! FLOORS PLEASE!
THREE
NINE!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

He who walks alone will gain
Something all cannot attain;
Strong, serene and unafraid,
Needing no man's arm for aid;
Lonely, but with clearer gaze
Than if love's obscuring haze
Flung its veils across his eyes;
Lonely, but more sure and wise,
He will revel in his pride,
Thrusting kindly hearts aside.

He who walks alone will lose
Treasures simpler natures choose;
Eyes that smile across the hearth,
Tasks that tie him down to earth;
Homely duties yet so sweet
That they make the years too fleet.
He who walks alone may claim,
In the end, surpassing fame.
But the simpler souls are glad
With a joy he never had!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MEN have certainly grabbed off a lot of honors for themselves in human history. You're always hearing about how they invented civilization and put pockets in pants. But don't you believe it.

IT WAS THE LITTLE WOMAN WHO DID IT.

The boys may have made the big news, but it was the poor little woman at home who actually put over the job.

I'm thinking of Harry and Mame. They're the newest and the oldest thing in human history. If they had happened back in 1849, we'd be raving about them now as "covered wagon" heroes. But, seeing as they're just part of 1929, we call them gasoline gypsies and don't give them a second look. Or in their simple lives they are reproducing the story of the race.

Harry is 28. He cooks in the country restaurant where I eat. Mame is 23. She stays at home with Jerry, the eight-months-old baby. And that phrase, "she stays at home" That phrase means a lot to Mame, for it is the first real home she has ever known.

Harry and Mame have been married for six years. Until last year they trekked around in their rattle-shackle flivver, camping wherever they felt like it. Then Jerry came, and both loved it. There's hardly a State in the Union that those vagabonds haven't visited.

I don't suppose they were ever more than a couple of dollars ahead on the exchequer and often many a dollar behind. But they didn't care. They slept in haystacks and took odd jobs "bashing" when the flivver was laid up for temporary repairs. Then they'd go on again. Going on was the best thing they did. It was the only thing Harry ever wanted to do. But Mame I suspect, always had an other notion in her head.

Last year, just before the baby came, they settled down in this town. It was to be just one more "overnight stop." But they're still settled. Mame has rented a tiny, three-room bungalow on the edge of town. It's ready furnished, but slowly and surely Mame is acquiring possession of her own. She has six guest towels now and a red elephant she got in the carnival and a green glass smoking set and a jumper for the baby.

And try to budge her!

"Say, Mame, let's move along," pleads Harry. "Gosh, I'm fed up with this hick outfit. The kid's old enough to travel now. Let's take a trip down into Mexico or up into Canada. We've got enough for new tires—"

But Mame turns a deaf ear to his pleading. She has acquired a home. And a baby. And six guest towels.

When guest towels come in gypsying goes out, as Harry has discovered to his grief.

Mame "belongs somewhere" now. She intends that the baby shall belong, too. She isn't going to have him wandering over the face of the earth. She's already planning on the day when he, too, will have a red elephant on the mantle piece and a towel bush in the yard—and guest towels.

As for Harry— Well, Harry's just one more Pinioned Papa. He'll stay right here and earn the rent and chow and let the other fellows take the trips to Mexico and Canada. For Harry's roving days are over.

Some day he'll get over being mad about it and work up a good line about how he "settled down for the sake of the little fellow"! And if he reads up on history he'll join the other males in thinking how he saved civilization. But civilization would have died in the shell if it had depended on Harry. It was Mame who did it. The petty little woman who hog-tied him with a family and a charge account was the one when is really responsible for civilization.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE Younger Generation is getting awfully fatigued trying to live down to its reputation.

It would take an archaeologist to discover the exact age of a modern woman, now that she is no longer dated by her face or her clothes.

Love is not the flame Love is that glowing tenderness which is left after the flame has died down and the novelty has worn off.

It is the mission of a vacuum cleaner to keep all the dirt out of the corners, even though it makes life hideous while doing it—but why do some woman seem to fancy that that's a man's notion of an ideal wife?

Nobody ever longed for a "ghost writer" more desperately than the man who is trying to compose a love letter which will "click" and yet not be negotiable in a damage suit.

Fitted handbags containing automatic revolvers to match the bride's going-away gown will soon be the modish thing in wedding gifts.

SOME woman is always trying to force something on a man. First it's his mother trying to force castor oil down him; then it's his teacher trying to cram an education into him; then it's a girl trying to wish marriage on him; and finally, his wife trying to stuff spinach down him.

With debutantes declaring that they are "tired of dancing with college boys," and night club hostesses hiring bouncers to throw them out, it looks as though the only touch of glamour left to being "collegiate" consists in going around without a hat.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 13—The "My Pal" theme invariably threads itself into the Broadway fellowship. Its mawkish sentimentality mists the eye when supper club stayouts sign off in barber shop chords at sunup. After midnight everybody along the street is a pal. Good old Al! What a boy!

But the calloused Broadwayite has long since learned when in trouble to avoid asking favors of his fellows. The Broadway good fellowship consists in helping those who do not need it. The "helping hand" is extended chiefly in giving $10 a plate dinners to millionaire actors.

A Broadway wag once emphasized the idea by the dramatic exclamation: "My Pal," and drawing a finger across his throat. Broadway genuflects only to success. When the bankroll vanishes the lights flash "Detour." It lives in the eternal now and "has been" is not in its lexicon.

The "come back" is seldom achieved along the street. The White Way failures who have been restored to useful citizenship, as a rule, turned their backs on the thoroughfares and started over again in new pastures. Some of Hollywood's astounding successes were former Broadway failures.

At night on street corners, in speakeasies and chop houses may be found groups of professional cadgers spinning their roseate tales of erstwhile triumphs. These are not always the vagaries of the chronic down-and-outer but throbbing chapters from real life.

Broadway is ever ready with its rousing: "He was a good fellow when he had it!" Its crocodile tears mean nothing and cost less. Alcoholic sympathies are usually forgotten in the agony of next morning's headaches. A sober Broadway has a cold eye for the luckless. It cannot forgive Providence for letting fools live.

Those refrains stressing home, mother and dear old pal of mine find an enthusiastic response when lights burn brightest but are as artificial as the glitter. Broadway seems a bed of roses to those on top, but those who sink find the usual thorns. Ask the boys with the tin cups and pencils: they know!

Those closely clipped hedges and lawns and white fences are fading from the Manhattan picture. This mellow section in the west Twenties has stood without an architectural change since the Civil War but today is passing into the sacrificial maw of progress—the final strip in New York's vanishing tranquility.

Seventy years ago it was the aristocratic and fashionable Gold Coast. And then came its picturesquely shabby gentility. From the broad sidewalks one saw oil lamps, be-laced curtains, Spanish balconies wrought in iron, and those fruit-in-plate pastels in the chaste custom of an almost forgotten era.

Several years ago they tried to revive Chelsea Village. They knocked out walls and made enormous studio rooms. Raymond Hitchcock moved there, as did Henry Hadley the musician, Boardman Robinson, the artist, and others who attained celebrity. But the renaissance refused to jell. So Chelsea passed to the wreckers.

There is no use trying to placate one of those tantalizing drunks with an imaginary grievance who continues querying: "You don't like me, do you?" At dinner last night a gentleman headed off a tormenting session with a frank: "No." And the stew departed.

New York is to see the dazzling speedy game jai-ali—called hi-li. It comes from the Basque country and is extremely popular in Mexico and now in Florida. Benny Leonard, the pugilist, will introduce it to Gotham. The game is played on a court against a background of black wall with a small white ball that travels with the zip of a bullet. It is cast and caught in a sort of shovel Basket fastened to the hands. It makes tennis look like a slow motion picture. Leonard is to include in big league Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Chicago.

The real reason for that staid old institution—the Union League Club—moving from 39th st. and 5th ave. to Park ave., was noise. From the street the club always had a sepulchral solemnity with wraith-like figures tiptoeing around. With my guilty flair for cutting up, I've always wanted to sail a feather through an open window, just to create a clatter and commotion.

And after nightfall in the windows of the club I often notice a group of deaf mutes gossiping in sign language. There's thoughtful wholesomeness for you!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

IT is not very clubby of Sir Esme Howard to declare wartime prohibition on a lot of Parifists.

Sir Esme is the author of that famous bum-mot, "Esme no questions and I'll tell you no lies."

He is also the dean of the diplomatic corps, subject to referendum and recall.

When a man is a dean that means he is the oldest man there. We have respect for gray hair in America, even when it is in court papers.

The example of the dean will be followed by other ambassadors, and soon diplomatic Washington will be as dry as an ant on a hot rock.

This will mean the end of the social war in the District of Columbia.

If there ain't no liquor at the table, why should a lady struggle for precedence in the seating arrangements?

If all the embassies twist them selves into prohibition, then we will have to adjust our economic scheme of things to deal with sober diplomats.

When a nation recalled its representative in the old days, it meant war.

Now, it means a headache.

Wine is a mocker and strong drink is raging and the two of them are the salt of the earth.

Diplomatic life in Washington has surely been free and unequal.

If a diplomat wanted to drink in his own embassy there was no power on earth that could pull his elbow down.

An embassy is sacred ground. With bottles for tombstones and toasts for epitaphs.

When interviewing the dean, we asked, "Sir Esme, is it true that fear of the British Lion is really a gargle?"

Sir Esme said, "Don't Esme that."

Which is the only way to get information out of diplomats. Treat 'em like butterflies and sneak up on 'em with a net.

The ministers plenipotentiary with powers extraordinary will now be ambassadors probationary with hop pockets ordinary.

With Washington dry, we are entering upon a new regime, and an aspirin tablet becomes the cornerstone of a new and greater civilization.
